FOREWORD

Many American soccer fans are familiar with the North American Soccer League (NASL), which flourished in the 1970s and ’80s and then died. Far fewer are familiar with the fact that it had all happened before, in the original American Soccer League, which operated from 1921 to 1931.

This is not the semipro ASL that existed in the United States from 1933 to 1983. This is an earlier league, one that, like the NASL, was an attempt to implant professional soccer in the United States, relying heavily on imported players. It’s one that has largely been forgotten. Most lists of ASL champions begin with the 1933-34 season.

Colin Jose, who told the story of the NASL in one of his earlier books, is the kind of historian whose skills bring this story to life. He is a meticulous, painstaking researcher, one who spends hundreds of hours a year studying old newspapers on microfilm in libraries and who writes hundreds of letters a year to potential sources of information. And in the places he seeks, wedged in between thousands of newspaper stories about other sports, and packed away in hundreds of attics and scrapbooks, is where the story of the American Soccer League of the 1920s can be found. I have done a lot of this same sort of research myself, but I don’t kid myself that I am in a class with Colin.

And not only was the research that went into this book impressive, so is the writing. As interesting to me as are the statistical tables in this book, the prose accounts of the era and its leading figures are even more fascinating.

Alec McNab, the forerunner of Pele in the sense that he was an established star who gave the new league credibility when he arrived in Boston in 1924, is here. Sam Mark, the team owner who gave his name to one of the league’s great teams, the Fall River Marksmen, is here. Archie Stark, who moved from Scotland to New Jersey as a teenager and later became the first American soccer superstar, is here. Bethlehem Steel, the great American soccer powerhouse of the first quarter of the 20th Century, is here.

The original American Soccer League didn’t last, a victim of both the Depression and political struggles within the sport. In the years since, its story has largely been forgotten, and with it soccer’s part in the famous decade of American sports that was the 1920s. Fortunately, thanks to Colin Jose, that story hasn’t been lost.

PREFACE

One of the many tragedies that surround the sport of soccer football in the United States and Canada is that few detailed records remain of the many great teams and players of the distant or even more recent past. What few records do remain have sometimes been obtained from the lists of winners engraved on the trophies that have survived, the defeated finalists forgotten.

Back in 1969 I received from the American Soccer League of that time a list of the winners of the ASL championship. The list began with the winners of the 1933-34 season, the Kearny Irish-Americans. At the time I thought nothing about it, but imagine my surprise when, many years later, in searching through microfilm of the New York Times of 1925 for details of the United States versus Canada international of that year, I found details of the American Soccer League. How could this be, I wondered, when according to the American Soccer League, the league began operating in 1933?

I talked to a number of people, searched through what books there were on the history of the game in the United States, and discovered that yes, there was an American Soccer League before 1933, but no one seemed to know a great deal about it.

Finally I decided to find out when the league began and try to compile a list of the champions before 1933. I found that the league was formed, not in 1933, but twelve years earlier in 1921, and as my research progressed I realized that these forgotten early years of the American Soccer League represented perhaps the most important decade in American soccer to that time—a decade matched only in importance by the 17 years of the North American Soccer League of the 1970s and 1980s.

In order to grasp its significance, not only to the history of soccer in the United States and Canada, but also its impact on the European game of that time, it became necessary to reconstruct the record of the ASL from its first games in 1921 until its collapse in chaos in 1932.

To do this required many hours of working with newspaper microfilm, not only at McMaster University in my hometown of Hamilton, Ontario, but also in the course of many trips to the library in Fall River, Massachusetts. In my search for the official records of this league, I came up empty. Perhaps they are out there somewhere in a stack of papers in someone's basement or attic, but in the opinion of the late Sam Foulds, for so long the official historian of the United States Soccer Federation, they were lost when the Federation moved its offices from the Cornish Arms in New York City to the Empire State Building following World War II.

Sam, who had collected every piece of information on the history of soccer in the United States that he could lay his hands on, certainly didn't have them, and neither did the National Soccer Hall of Fame in Oneonta, New York. My letters to the United States Soccer Federation, asking for help, went unanswered.

Consequently the record of the American Soccer League contained in this book has been compiled almost entirely from newspaper microfilm, suplemented by information drawn from numerous sources in the United States, Canada, and Europe.

Among the many problems in doing research this way is that newspapers in those days rarely used first names in listing players or in game reports. Also, as with today, soccer was not a priority with the sports departments of newspapers, with the rare exceptions of Fall River and New Bedford. In my search it was also noticable that different newspapers came up with different goalscorers for the same game and in some cases different lineups.

Throughout this book you will find references to a team named Fore River. This team should not be confused with Fall River. Fore River was a team from a shipyard located on the Fore River in Quincy, Massachusetts, just south of Boston. The team was not a member of the American Soccer League.

Anyone wishing to do research into the records of the American Soccer League during this period will find a number of games in the newspapers that are not recorded in this book. Further research into these games will show that the results were later nullified by the league for a variety of reasons and taken out of the records by the league.

The author would be interested in hearing from anyone who might have any copies of Spalding's Official Soccer Football Guide. Separate such guides were published for both the college and for the professional and senior amateur game during the early years of the century. Many of the college guides seem to have survived, but very few of the professional and senior amateur guides. The author is also interested in hearing from anyone who might have copies of the magazine Soccer Star from the late 1920s and 1930s, Soccer Weekly, published in early 1927, and Challenger, published in 1923.

On the whole, however, I believe this to be an accurate record of the games and players of the American Soccer League from 1921 to 1931, years often referred to as the "Golden Years of American Soccer" in the United States.

No record of the league and league cup games played in the American Soccer League in those years would be complete without also including a record of the U.S. Open Cup games played by the ASL teams and also the games played against foreign teams touring the United States and Canada.

This book, then, is a record of the forgotten years of American soccer, the years of the first attempt to introduce big-time professional soccer to the United States.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

The author would like to thank the staff of the reference department of the Fall River Public Library, Paula Costa, Daniel Lelievre, Mary Reynolds, and in particular Anne-Marie Klegraefe for their help in enabling me to compile this book. Mrs. Klegraefe was especially helpful in tracing the location of Mark's Stadium and in finding specific information on players, and all of the staff were supportive during the long hours I spent in the library. I would also like to thank guard Jim Sousa for his friendship and for allowing me to park in the staff parking lot.

Additionally, this book could not have been compiled without the help of the staff of McMaster University in my hometown of Hamilton, Ontario, the Hamilton Public Library, and the library at the University of Massachusetts in Amherst.

I also received a lot of co-operation from the staff of the public libraries in New Bedford, Boston, and Holyoke, Massachusetts; Hartford, Connecticut; Bethlehem and Philadelphia, Pennsylvania; Newark, New Jersey; and Pawtucket and Providence, Rhode Island, and of the Research Libraries of the New York Public Library. Also a special mention should be made of the work done on my behalf by Mrs. O.M. Geddes, Senior Research Assistant at the National Library of Scotland in Edinburgh.

Jim Creasy of Morden, Surrey, England, supplied an enormous amount of information on British players who moved to the United States, while Gunnar Persson, editor of the Swedish soccer annual Fotboll, and Swedish soccer historian Alf Frantz supplied a lot of the information on Swedish players. Italian soccer historian Gabriele Crocco supplied a lot of details that were very hard to find on Janos Nehadoma and also put me in touch with Miroslav Marek in Czechoslovakia, who traced the games played by Fall River in Europe in 1930. Norwegian soccer historian Kare Torgrimsen filled in the gaps on Norwegian players in the ASL.

I would also like to thank the late Mr. E. Griffith, a Director of Preston North End Football Club; M.J. Spinks, the Secretary of Barnsley Football Club; Robert Reid, the Secretary of Partick Thistle Football Club; Eric White, the Program Editor of Brentford Football Club; Richard Cairns, the Program Editor of Kilmarnock Football Club; plus club historians Richard Owen (Portsmouth Football Club), Ian Rigby (Preston North End), Frank Grande (Northampton Town Football Club), Peter Cullen (Bury Football Club), Ray Simpson (Burnley Football Club), Frank Tweddle (Darlington Football Club), and Gilbert Upton (Tranmere Rovers Football Club) for their help in tracing players.

Others who answered my letters and appeals for information were Bernard Aspinwall (Scotland), Mervyn Baker, Mark Chapman, Steve Emms, Brian Mellowship, Paul Taylor (England), Stephen Byrne and John Duffy (Northern Ireland), Stephen Burke (Republic of Ireland), and Jonny Stokkeland (Norway), while Ray Spiller, Secretary of the Association of Football Statisticians, 22 Bretons, Essex, England, published my letters for help in the AFS Report.

In the United States, Mrs. Janice Anderson (daughter of Ned Tate) supplied valuable pictures and information; Mrs. Alice Phillips (daughter of Charlie McGill) supplied rare action photographs of Fall River; Mrs. Marie Florie (wife of Tom Florie) and Jock Brown (former New York Giants goalkeeper) supplied photographs; Mrs. Dorothy Horner (wife of Billy Horner) gave me information on her husband's career; and Gladys Lamorte (daughter of George Gustafsson) supplied information on her father's career.

Jerry Mahrer (son of Pavel Mahrer) supplied pictures and information on his father's career in Czechoslovakia and in the U.S.; Dan O'Brien (son of Shamus O'Brien) information and photographs on his father's career; and Harry Pearce, Jr., George Moorhouse, Jr., and Edward McGhee on their fathers' careers.

Further assistance came from Albert Colone, former Executive Director, National Soccer Hall of Fame; Ed Clough, official photographer, National Soccer Hall of Fame; Roger Allaway, President, Society for American Soccer History; Richard L. Wheeler, Andover Historical Society; George Rogers, Secretary, Keamy Soccer Alumni Association; Mike Burnham, soccer historian in Providence; Walter Bahr, former Chairman, Selection Committee, National Soccer Hall of Fame; Tom Hatfield, a soccer historian in Cleveland; and Mark Pollak of Baltimore, who has compiled a book on professional sports franchises in the United States and Canada.

I would also like to thank my wife, Karen, for her help and her patience in setting me straight on so many aspects of the computer work, and Les Jones of Covershots in Toronto for his help with some of the photographs.

CHAMPIONS AND CUP WINNERS

There were two competitions within the American Soccer League. The first and most important was the league championship, the second the American Soccer League Cup, for which the Lewis Cup was awarded.

THE AMERICAN MENACE

In Scotland it was known as the "American Menace"—the drain of top class soccer players from Scottish clubs to the new American clubs springing up across the Atlantic. In fact the leaders of the Scottish Football Association were so concerned about the problem that a special meeting was held in Glasgow on August 19,1925, to discuss what to do about it.

At first the drain on the Scottish game had been minimal, made up of players who were simply seeking a new life overseas. In their cases the fact that they could play soccer enabled them to get a job in a factory and at the same time assist the factory team.

However, starting in the summer of 1924, with the expansion of the number of teams in the American Soccer League from eight to twelve teams, all of this changed. In particular the Boston Wonder Workers, one of the new teams in the league, obtained the services of Scottish international wing half Tommy Muirhead of Glasgow Rangers as a player-coach. Muirhead persuaded a number of other top class Scottish players to join him and soon the race to sign top-class players, not only from Scotland, but also from other countries, was on.

Economics, as is so often the case, was a factor in many players leaving their homelands to play in the American Soccer League. One of the players signed by Boston for the 1924-25 season was Scottish international winger Alec McNab. One year later, on his return to Scotland for a vacation, he was asked by a reporter for the Evening News of Glasgow if he would be returning to the United States. "Going back!" McNab is quoted as saying. "It will need to be a very tempting offer indeed to keep me in Scotland. From what I have heard on the other side and since I came home, terms here for next season are nothing to boast about. No I'm a sure starter for Boston."

The terms McNab is referring to are wages. Talking to a reporter from another Scottish paper, the Sunday Post, before he left for the United States the first time, in 1924, McNab, who had been playing for Greenock Morton in the Scottish First Division, said, "Take my own case. I was offered only four pounds a week. I don't think that's anything like a decent wage. And when I asked to be put on the transfer list I was told a sum that nearly took my breath away. It was more than 1,500 pounds."

McNab continued. "Fifteen hundred pounds, who's going to pay that for me? It was obvious that the sum was prohibitive and that I was being so tied down that I could not do other than sign for Morton.

"Well I was determined not to do that. I went to my work in the engineering yard and one day a cable from the other side arrived. In it was an offer of round about 12 pounds a week, to work and play football.

"I jumped at it. Booked my passage. Made no secret about where I was going. And here I am," he said, as he talked to the reporter on the deck of the liner Marburn as it sailed down the Clyde.

But while McNab's departure was all legal and aboveboard, the signing of Partick Thistle inside forward Johnny Ballantyne by Boston caused an uproar. Ballantyne, it seems, had accepted close season, or summer wages, from his club, Partick Thistle, something considered akin to accepting a contract for the coming season, before signing for Boston.

Ballantyne told the Sunday Star, "Oh, I got this offer only the other day and it was at the last moment I was determined to go.

"I have written to manager Easton about it, and I hope that he will receive my letter sympathetically. I have no doubt I'll be criticized for having departed so suddenly, but then, the offer came suddenly, and I had to make up my mind quickly.

"Same as the rest—I want to improve my position. Who doesn't? I hope to make about 12 pounds a week in America. What chance have I of doing that here?" The feeling in Scottish soccer circles at the time was that if Ballantyne had returned his summer wages to the club, his case would have been looked on with more understanding.

It was much the same story with Dunfermline goalkeeper Willie Paterson. He said, "I was offered three pounds a week by Dunfermline. Not three pounds all year round mind you. Just in the playing season. And no signing-on fee, either.

"What can you expect me to do when I am offered such attractive terms from the other side? As a matter of fact I have been in negotiation with Muirhead's bosses for some time and I might have sailed with him if I cared."

From that time on hundreds of players crossed the Atlantic. Some, like McNab, made the United States their home, others played in the American Soccer League for several years and then returned to Europe. Those who stayed obviously had good things to say about their experience; those who came and played briefly were critical of everything from the changing accommodation to the quality of the playing surfaces.

This book records not only the results, goalscorers, and lineups of the teams that made up the American Soccer League of the 1920s, but also lists all of the players who played in the ASL in those years and, where known, their backgrounds. Many of the players who played in the ASL were among the outstanding players of their day, and this book contains biographies of those players.

AMERICAN SOCCER LEAGUE HISTORY

From the late 1800s until the Great Depression of the 1930s the city of Fall River in southern Massachusetts was the cotton textile center of the Western hemisphere, boasting in its heyday over one hundred mills and four million spindles.

Located some 55 miles south of Boston on the Atlantic seaboard, and with a population today of just over 92,000, Fall River attracted thousands of immigrants from all over the world to its booming industry, which, in 1920, produced textiles valued at almost $150 million. In fact, between 1870 and 1910, Fall River was home to the largest percentage of foreign-born people of any American population center.

Life was harsh for these people working long, hard hours in the mills, and when it came to a break from the drudgery, many of them turned to soccer, the sport of their homelands, as a means of escape. On the strength of this interest, Fall River became a power in American soccer long before the professional American Soccer League was formed in 1921.

The growth of soccer interest in Fall River was typical of many American cities of the northeast during that era, as immigrants poured in, bringing their love of soccer with them. Most of the teams of that day were company teams formed at first by employees and then supported by the companies themselves. Among the most famous of these was the legendary Bethlehem Steel in Bethlehem, Pennsylvania, and others such as J&P Coats, “the Threadmen” in Pawtucket, Rhode Island, and Fleischer Yarn in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

This growth of soccer interest led to the formation of the American Soccer League, the first truly professional soccer league formed in the United States.

The league was formed at the Hotel Astor in New York City on the evening of May 7,1921, and began play in September of that year with eight clubs, all located along the eastern seaboard. Those teams were New York Football Club, Jersey City Celtics, Todd Shipyards of Brooklyn, Harrison Soccer Club of Harrison, New Jersey, J&P Coats of Pawtucket, Rhode Island, Holyoke Falcos of Holyoke, Massachusetts, Fall River United of Fall River, Massachusetts, and Bethlehem Steel, which chose to play that first season as Philadelphia Field Club.

From these small beginnings the ASL grew into a league of international renown, a league which sent shock waves around the soccer world and almost resulted in the United States Football Association (as today’s United States Soccer Federation was known in those days) being kicked out of FIFA, the world governing body of the game.

In effect, the American Soccer League was an earlier version of the more recent North American Soccer League, which operated from 1968 to 1984, in that it imported many famous players from Europe and played them alongside the outstanding American and Canadian players of the day.

Unfortunately, as with so many ambitious attempts to establish a professional soccer league in the United States, its existence was relatively short-lived. This was due in part to squabbling within the United States soccer community and also because of the devastating effects of the Wall Street crash of 1929 and the subsequent depression, which shut down many of the factories the soccer fans worked in.

When the ASL finally collapsed in 1932, it was replaced with a reformed and less ambitious version in 1933. This "second" ASL survived, despite many changes and the collapse of numerous teams, until 1983, when it too failed at about the same time as its more famous rival, the North American Soccer League. A "third" ASL began play in 1988 and merged with the Western Soccer League in 1990 to form today's American Professional Soccer League, now known as the "A" league.

The heyday of the "first" American Soccer League began in 1924 with the expansion of the league from eight teams to twelve playing a 44-game schedule which started in September and continued right through the winter until the following May.

References to the ASL teams of that era are to be found in soccer history books around the world, while numerous top players, particularly from Scotland and Ireland, crossed the Atlantic, not only to play soccer, but for the promise of jobs in the new American industries.

At the start of the 1924-25 season the American Soccer League included the following clubs: Bethlehem Steel, Boston Wonder Workers, Brooklyn Wanderers, Fall River Marksmen, Fleischer Yarn of Philadelphia, Indiana Flooring of New York, J&P Coats, Newark Skeeters, New Bedford Whalers, New York Giants, Philadelphia Field Club, and Providence Clamdiggers.

Most of these teams lasted a number of years, but others, such as the Shawsheen Indians from the village of Shawsheen, near Andover, in northern Massachusetts, in 1925 and Springfield Babes from Springfield, Massachusetts, in 1926, came and went.

Attendances varied, with league games in New York City drawing around 6,000; however, in the soccer hotspots of New England the average was over 8,000. Certain games, such as the bitterly fought local contests between Fall River and New Bedford, always drew in excess of 10,000. Such was the feeling between the two cities, on the soccer field, that New Bedford refused to regard Mark's Stadium, the home of Fall River, as a neutral ground when playing another ASL team in playoff games. Fall River is never neutral the Whalers claimed; it is hostile territory.

In those days teams traveled not by car or train, but by boat down the coast. The ships of the Fall River Line regularly carried the ASL teams and their fans between stopovers in Boston, New Bedford, Fall River, and New York.

A new dimension was injected into the American Soccer League in the spring of 1926, when the Austrian club Hakoah of Vienna toured the United States and drew crowds in unprecedented numbers. Austrian champions in the 1924-25 season, the Hakoah club was made up entirely of Jewish players, and when they played a combined team of players from Indiana Flooring and the New York Giants at the Polo Grounds in New York City on May 1,1926, the game drew a record attendance of 46,000. This attendance was the largest crowd ever to watch a soccer game in the United States, up until that time. It was a record that was to last until the glory days of the New York Cosmos and the 1984 Olympics.

So popular was Hakoah that the team returned for a second tour in 1927. However, by that time many of the Hakoah stars of 1926 had been lured to the United States permanently to play for the New York Giants and Brooklyn Wanderers, leading to serious problems with the international soccer community.

Despite the addition of the outstanding Austrian and Hungarian players of Hakoah to two of the three New York clubs, Fall River continued to be the dominant ASL club. Bought by local businessman Sam Mark at the end of the first ASL season, the team adopted his name, and under his shrewd guidance won the ASL championship in the 1923-24, 1924-25, 1925-26, 1928-29, 1929 Fall, and 1930 seasons. Fall River also won the national championship, the United States Open Cup in 1924, 1927,1930, and 1931, and the Lewis Cup in 1930.

Playing at Mark's Stadium just across the state line in North Tiverton, Rhode Island, and not in Fall River itself, the team was able to avoid the Massachusetts Blue Laws, which forbade charging admission to sporting events on a Sunday in the state of Massachusetts. In those days Mark's Stadium could hold 15,000 fans, but today the bleachers are gone and all that remains is an empty overgrown field, overlooked by the derelict Bourne Mill on one side and the modern Ponta Delgada club on the other.

During this era Fall River also produced, among a string of talented local players, two of the finest soccer players ever produced in the United States—Billy Gonsalves and Bert Patenaude. Born in Fall River, they not only starred for their hometown team, but also for a number of other teams in the ASL and the United States national team in the first FIFA World Cup played in Montevideo, Uruguay, in 1930.

Today one of the criticisms of American soccer is that it fails to produce good goalscorers. The argument has been that the game is only just being developed and that developing great goalscorers takes much more time than, say, great goalkeepers. That argument doesn't stand the light of day when we look at the 1920s, when American-born and developed forwards were scoring goals in bunches. Most famous of these was the great Archie Stark, who scored 67 goals in 44 games for Bethlehem Steel in the 1924-25 league season and three more in cup competition. In addition to Stark there was little Davie Brown, who stood just five foot three, and scored over 53 goals in league and cup games for New York Giants in 1926-27, and Johnny Nelson, who was second only to Stark in overall goalscoring in ASL history. The aforementioned Gonsalves and Patenaude were also among the greatest goalscorers in the history of the league.

While the ASL imported many players from Europe, the trading also went the other way. Canadian-born goalkeeper Joe Kennaway, who played in the ASL for Providence, Fall River, and New Bedford, later had an outstanding career in Scotland for Glasgow Celtic. Barney Battles, who came to Boston as a teenager from Scotland, later returned to the land of his birth a full-fledged star, having learned his craft with the Boston Wonder Workers. Battles went on to play for Scotland. Bob McDonald, who grew up in Hamilton, Ontario, went from Bethlehem Steel to the Glasgow Rangers, as did Bob McAuley, who played for Providence and Fall River after growing up in Canada. Similarly the great Danny Blair, who was born in Scotland, played his early soccer in Canada before joining Providence and then returning to Britain to star with Clyde and Aston Villa.

Alec Jackson, one of the most famous Scottish players and a member of the never-to be-forgotten "Wembley Wizards," the Scottish national team that humiliated England in 1928, played the 1923-24 ASL season for Bethlehem Steel before returning the Britain to star for Huddersfield Town and Chelsea. In a little-known story, Jackson's outstanding career almost ended before it had begun, when he misjudged the depth of water in a swimming pool in Fall River and suffered severe head injuries.

The halcyon days of the ASL, when soccer's popularity was growing by leaps and bounds, lasted from the summer 1924 until fall 1928. At the time it must have seemed that the game had finally arrived and had a bright future in the United States. The same could have been said of more recent years when the NASL, toward the end of the 1970s, seemed to be well established. But unbeknown to all, in 1928 and 1929 there were some very dark clouds on the horizon. The beginning of the end for the American Soccer League began in the summer of 1928 when Charles A. Stoneham, the owner of the New York Giants baseball club (now the San Francisco Giants), who also owned the New York Nationals (formerly Indiana Flooring) of the American Soccer League, made a series of proposals. Among these proposals was one suggesting that the league withdraw its teams from the United States Open Cup unless the national governing body agreed to play the competition in the spring, following the ASL season. The USFA refused. Ironically the Nationals were the holders of the Open Cup at the time, having won this competition, regarded as the national championship, the previous spring.

This proposal was made in order to stop the disruption of the ASL schedule caused by playing Open Cup games in mid-season. The idea was not new in that it had caused problems between the ASL and the USFA during the 1924-25 season when the ASL clubs had also withdrawn. To put the idea in today's perspective, it was the equivalent to asking all the clubs in the English Premier League or Football League to withdraw from the famous English FA Cup competition in order to concentrate on the league.

Mr. Stoneham's proposal was adopted by the ASL and all the clubs were ordered to withdraw from the Open Cup, much to the displeasure of the USFA. However, three ASL clubs—Bethlehem Steel, New York Giants, and Newark Skeeters—defied the league ruling and were subsequently suspended by the league. The United States Football Association ordered them reinstated and the ASL refused. The ASL was then suspended by the USFA but continued to operate as an outlaw league. "Outlaw" in the sense that it was no longer affiliated with organized U.S. soccer and thus no longer operating within the international soccer family of FIFA, the governing body of world soccer. The "soccer war" was on. Once again there is a parallel to the North American Soccer League in that in its early years the then United States Soccer Football Association and the Canadian Soccer Association had sanctioned one coast-to-coast professional soccer league, known as the United Soccer Association. Another group, the National Professional Soccer League, had also applied for permission to operate a league and been turned down, but decided to operate anyway in defiance of that ruling. Eventually, after a lot of damage had been done, the two leagues merged to form the NASL.

As a result of the expulsion of the ASL, thus leaving three professional clubs without a league to play in, in the fall of 1928 the USFA brought about the formation of a league in opposition to the ASL. Known as the Eastern Professional Soccer League, the league included the three ASL teams that had defied the league ruling plus a number of teams from the Southern New York State Soccer Association (SNYSSA) and a new club, formed by former players of Vienna Hakoah, known as New York Hakoah.

This in its turn upset the SNYSSA, which resigned from the USFA and joined forces with the ASL. The two leagues applied for affiliation with FIFA but were turned down. The war lasted for one year with the American Soccer League and the Eastern Soccer League playing in opposition to one another. Peace was finally declared in October 1929 and the outcome was the formation, for political reasons, of the Atlantic Coast League, a merger of the ASL and the ESL, and a face-saver for both sides. The ASL and ESL schedules which had already begun were abandoned.

In fact this was really the old ASL, temporarily under another name, and while the Atlantic Coast League played the first half of the 1930 season, the fall half was played under the American Soccer League banner. As a result of this the ASL season, which had previously been a fall-spring schedule, with the teams playing right through the winter, was now a spring-fall season, divided by the summer months.

However, before then a much more important and significant event had taken place, one which not only added to the damage that had been done by the soccer war but also caused untold suffering throughout the industrialized world.

The stock markets in the United States had been in a steady decline since early October 1929, and when the market on Wall Street crashed on October 24, it signified the start of the Great Depression, throwing thousands of people out of work, some for many years. At about the same time, the soccer war was being settled. One following on top of the other was too much for the fragile soccer scene. Although the ASL remained relatively stable in terms of clubs through 1930, things began to unravel in 1931, and by 1932, the league was in disarray.

Long before this time, however, the actions of some ASL clubs had produced an international crisis. In January 1927 the national associations of Austria, Hungary, Czechoslovakia, and Yugoslavia complained to FIFA that the New York Giants and Brooklyn Wanderers, among other ASL clubs, were encouraging European players to break their contracts. This was an obvious reference to the former Vienna Hakoah players moving to the United States and signing with the Brooklyn Wanderers and New York Giants.

The whole question was brought before the Sixteenth Annual Congress of FIFA held at the House of Parliament in Helsinki, Finland, on June 4, 1927. At this Congress the national associations of Austria and Hungary sought the suspension of the United States Football Association from FIFA over this matter. But a letter from the USFA and a speech by USFA President Andrew Brown headed off disaster, and the matter was settled amicably.

Among the first to violate the new agreement were the Scottish clubs Hearts and Aberdeen; each signed players still under contracts with ASL clubs.

The “first” American Soccer League teams played a number of exhibition games or “friendlies” against foreign opposition other than Vienna Hakoah, although none had such a lasting impact.

Touring the United States in those years were Sparta Prague of Czechoslovakia in 1926, the national team of Uruguay, then Olympic champions, plus Real Madrid (Spain) and Maccabi Tel Aviv (Palestine) in 1927; Glasgow Rangers (Scotland) and an Italian representative team made up mainly of players from Brescia in 1928; Preston North End (England) and Sabaria Budapest (Hungary) in 1929; Glasgow Rangers (again), and Kilmarnock, the Scottish Cup holders, along with Hungaria Budapest, Marte (Mexico), and Sportivo Buenos Aires (Argentina) in 1930; and Glasgow Celtic (Scotland), Racing Club Madrid (Spain), and Velez Sarsfield (Argentina) in 1931.

As an indication of the standard of play in the ASL in the late 1920s, Fall River held Glasgow Rangers to a scoreless tie before 15,000 fans in Fall River in 1928. The year before, Boston and Newark both beat the national team of Uruguay. Fall River also defeated Kilmarnock 3-0 in 1930.

ASL teams also went overseas. Hakoah went to Brazil, Argentina, and Uruguay in 1930 and to Cuba and Costa Rica in 1931, while Fall River toured Czechoslovakia, Austria and Hungary in 1930.

Perhaps the greatest testimony to the standard of play in the ASL in those years was produced by the United States national team, which reached the semifinal of the World Cup in 1930. The American squad was made up largely of players from the American Soccer League: goalkeeper James Douglas (New York Nationals), fullback George Moorhouse (New York Giants), halfbacks Jim Gallagher (New York Nationals), Andy Auld (Providence) and Phil Slone (New York Giants), and forwards Billy Gonsalves and Bert Patenaude (Fall River Marksmen), Jim Brown (New York Giants), Tom Florie (New Bedford Whalers), Bart McGhee (New York Nationals), and Arnie Oliver, who played for a number of ASL clubs over the years. After the World Cup, fullback Alexander Wood joined the Brooklyn Wanderers.

These were known as the “Golden Years” of soccer in the United States, years when the game seemed to have a bright future, both as a spectator and participation sport. Great players such as Gonsalves, Patenaude, and Stark, had they played in the mainstream of European soccer, would have achieved international acclaim, but they chose to live and play in the United States.

THE AMERICAN SOCCER LEAGUE YEAR BY YEAR

This section contains the record of every league game played in the American Soccer League from 1921 to 1931. From 1921 to 1929 the season began in the fall and ran through the winter to the following spring. This changed in the fall of 1929 due to the conflict between the ASL and the USFA. Thus from the end of 1929 to 1931 there were distinct spring and fall seasons divided by winter and summer breaks. Most ASL games were played on weekends when factory workers had Saturday afternoons and all of Sunday off. Quite often teams played on both Saturday and Sunday, thereby placing a strain on the players. To overcome this, teams would rest some players for the Saturday game, or if the Saturday game was the more difficult, sit some out on Sunday.

Teams in the ASL also, as far as can be determined, loaned players to other ASL clubs. Fall River, who seemed to have a greater depth of talent, both from overseas and locally, did this with the idea of keeping up the standard of play in the league.

It should be noted that in most cases in this record, “familiar” or “nicknames” have been used rather than “proper” names. Therefore we have Bobby instead of Robert and Bill instead of William, because the familiar name is the one that people remember and the one used in match reports or references.

In some cases it has not been possible to determine which team was the home team and which the visiting team. This was mainly true of the New York teams where, for example, teams such as Indiana Flooring and New York Giants used the same field. Also included in this record are the results of games played in the United States Open Cup and the American Soccer League Cup or Lewis Cup games.

Year One 1921-22 - A Quiet Beginning

Eight clubs started the first American Soccer League season, but one club, Jersey City Celtics, dropped out not long after the season began, and its results were deleted from the record. Each team was scheduled to play each of the other teams four times, twice at home and twice away from home, for a total of 24 games. Four teams completed the entire schedule; three did not. The champions were actually Bethlehem Steel, but they played under the name of Philadelphia Field Club. The Holyoke Falco Club was owned by the Farr Alpaca Company and Todd Shipyards by William H. Todd.

The league headquarters in this first season were located at 126 Nassau Street in New York City. The President was W.L. Lewis of Bethlehem, Pennsylvania; Vice President, R.S. Cumming of Pawtucket, Rhode Island; Treasurer, Frederick J. Smith of Brooklyn, New York; Secretary, Thomas W. Cahill of Irvington, New Jersey, and Recording Secretary, J.E. Scholefield of New York City.

Year Two -1922-23 - Encouraging Progress

The league had a full eight teams during the 1922-23 season, with Bethlehem Steel playing under its own name. However, the full complement of teams was not realized until the middle of November when Brooklyn Wanderers filled the gap left by the decision of Todd Shipyards not to operate a team. Holyoke Falco had also dropped out, to be replaced by Paterson Football Club, and a new team played under the Philadelphia name. The new Brooklyn team was owned by Nathan Agar and played at Hawthorne Field. Agar was to become a powerful influence in the league for many years to come. New York Football Club continued to be owned by Hugh Magee.

A 28-game schedule was planned, but only three of the eight teams actually played the full 28 games. Adverse weather conditions were mainly responsible for this because of a particularly severe winter. The league, however, made progress both on and off the field, and there was a very favorable treasurer's report.

J&P Coats of Pawtucket won the championship in a close race with Bethlehem Steel. The league officials were: President, W.L. Lewis, Bethlehem, Pennsylvania; Vice President, R.S. Cumming, Pawtucket, Rhode Island; Treasurer, Frederick J. Smith, Brooklyn, New York; Secretary, Thomas W. Cahill, Irvington, New Jersey; Recording Secretary, James G. Barclay, Brooklyn, New York.

Year Three -1923-24 - Consolidation

League membership remained at eight for the 1923-24 season. There was a new team from Newark, owned by Tom Adam, picking up the former Harrison franchise, and the Paterson franchise, owned by Adolph Buslik, was sold to Maurice Vandeweghe and moved to New York City to become the New York National Giants, thus giving New York two teams in the league. The Giants played at New York Metropolitan Oval at 150th Street and Mott Avenue in the Bronx.

Once again a 28-game schedule was planned, but this time only one club, Bethlehem Steel, played the full 28 games. The strong Fall River team, owned by Sam Mark, won not only the league championship, but also the national championship, the United States Open Cup. The league officials were: President, Frederick J. Smith, Brooklyn, New York; Vice President, Thomas W. Cahill, Irvington, New Jersey; Treasurer, R.S. Cumming, Pawtucket, Rhode Island; Secretary, M.F. Kelly, Brooklyn, New York; Recording Secretary, James Armstrong, Brooklyn, New York.

Year Four -1924-25 - Expansion and Improvement

The summer of 1924 saw the American Soccer League expand from eight teams to twelve, leading to what have become known as “The Golden Years of American Soccer.” Beginning with this season, clubs in the ASL began to set their sights higher and the quality of play, and players in the league, improved dramatically. The twelve teams set out to play a 44-game schedule starting in September and continuing through the winter months to the following spring. Once again only Bethlehem Steel played the full 44 games.

Three of the new teams in the league were from New England, making five teams in all from that area and four within relatively short distances of one another around Narragansett Bay Boston, on the perimeter of this group, and one of the three new franchises, were known as the Wonder Workers, but often referred to as the “Woodsies” after their owner, A. G. Wood. The other two new franchises were both owned by men from Fall River, an indication of the depth of interest in that city. The owners of the New Bedford Whalers were Lawrence L. Holden, former president of the Fall River Rovers, and Harold Crooks, former secretary of the Fall River Rovers. Fall River Rovers won the U.S. Open Cup, the national championship, in 1917 and were beaten finalists in 1916 and 1918. Dave Pomfret was named manager of the New Bedford team. Providence was owned by Frank X. Perron, Edward Lavasseur, and E. F. Bergeron of Fall River, along with Charles Coppen and several other Providence men. Sam Fletcher was named the team’s manager.

In New York, the Indiana Flooring Company, with a team playing in the various state leagues, took over the franchise of the New York Football Club, while the fourth new team, Fleischer Yarn from Philadelphia, had won the United States Amateur Cup the previous spring. Ernest J. Viberg, former trainer for the Vikings of New York City, was given a franchise for the Indiana Flooring Football Club. Viberg was well-known in soccer circles because he had been the interpreter for the American teams touring Sweden before the ASL was formed.

Boston, in particular, made all the other clubs take notice by signing a number of well-known Scottish players. At the start of the season the team was coached by a well-known Scottish international, Tommy Muirhead of Glasgow Rangers, and included in the lineup was another Scottish international, outside right Alex McNab, while the rest of the team included a number of players with experience at the highest levels of Scottish soccer.

For the second year in a row, Fall River was the champion, owner Sam Mark strengthening his team to keep up with the new competition. The Marksmen, as they became known, developed an intense local rivalry with New Bedford and games between the two teams, whether at Marks Stadium in North Tiverton, just outside Fall River, or at Battery Park in New Bedford, regularly drew in excess of 10,000 spectators, while the average attendance for the Marksmen was around 8,000, the highest in the league. Frederick J. Smith of Brooklyn continued as President of the ASL.

Year Five -1925-26 - Fall River Again

The league remained stable with twelve teams for the 1925-26 season, but after one brief season at the top level, Fleischer Yarn dropped out, to be replaced by a team from the village of Shawsheen in northern Massachusetts. Known as the Shawsheen Indians, this team had won the national championship the previous season, when the ASL clubs had refused to enter. Located just outside the town of Andover, near Lawrence in the Merrimack River valley, the Shawsheen team was founded by George M. Wallace, sponsored by the American Woolen Company, and made up of some very experienced players.

The owner of the American Woolen Company, William Madison Wood, had at one time lived in Fall River and knew Sam Mark, who loaned some of the players under contract to the Marksmen to the new franchise to strengthen the team. The Indians began the season well, but the death in tragic circumstances of Mr. Wood and declining attendances at Balmoral Field, considered by many to be the best playing surface in the league at that time, forced the club to fold in late March of 1926, having played only 28 games of the 44-game schedule. Former team manager George M. Wallace owned the team for awhile following the death of Mr. Wood on February 2,1926. Points were awarded to the clubs with outstanding games to play against the Indians.

In this season only Fall River played its full slate of 44 games, a year in which the league standings were decided on a percentage basis for the first time. To achieve the percentage, the number of points obtained were divided into the number of points it was possible to obtain. Fall River won the championship for the third season.

Year Six - 1926-27 - Springfield In and Out

For the third season in a row, membership in the American Soccer League remained stable at twelve teams, with a new team in Springfield, Massachusetts, owned by A.G. Wood, the former Boston owner, taking over the franchise left vacant when Shawsheen folded. However, the twelfth franchise, as it had for Fleischer Yarn and Shawsheen Indians, proved to be unluckly for the Springfield Babes also; the team folded just after Christmas 1926.

As in the case of Shawsheen, clubs with outstanding games with Springfield were awarded the points, while many of the Springfield players became the property of Providence. In this season all but two teams completed the 44-game schedule, which was won by Bethlehem Steel.

During the month of December the Providence franchise acquired new ownership, with local businessmen Alexander Anderson, Richard Haworth, and Charles Goodwin taking over from the former Fall River owners.

This season also saw a new president take office in the person of Bill Cunningham, a former all-America running back at Dartmouth College. The new secretary was Dave Scott of Boston and with both men living in the Boston area the league office was moved out of New York to Boston.

Some new and progressive moves were introduced during this season, all of them well ahead of their time. For the first time, substitutes were permitted, each team being allowed to substitute two players up to 15 minutes from the end of the game. In addition goal judges were used, one at each end of the ground, and had two functions, the first and obvious one being to assist the referee in deciding when the ball had passed over the line and into the goal. The second was much more controversial and is a move under consideration by FIFA today, almost 70 years after it was first experimented with in the ASL. That is the introduction of the penalty box. In 1926 the ASL goal judges were required to keep the time of the penalties and players penalized were required to stand behind their own respective goals with the goal judge. Unlike hockey, where the penalty box has been an integral part of the game for many years, goalkeepers were not excluded.

The rules regarding conduct as introduced at that time and as published by the league were as follows.

> Ungentlemanly Conduct - Using profane or abusive language, yelling or making other noises at opponents, linesman or referee or toward spectators. Punishment: Fine of $5 and 5 minute suspension. Second offense-Fine of $20 and 10 minute suspension.
> Rough Play - Tripping, kicking or hacking opponents. Punishment: Suspension for 10 minutes and a fine of $20. Second Offense-Suspension for 15 minutes and a fine of $25.
> Unusual or Extraordinary Offenses - Assault or attempted assault on opponents, officials or spectators. Punishment: To be dealt with by the executive office within 5 days. Offenses committed within the grounds, but not on the playing field to be dealt with, with the same severity as those committed on the field of play.
> The above schedule is for professional players only. Amateur players will be dealt with by the league as it deems fit.
> Should any club be found guilty of paying the fines of their professional players, as above imposed, they are subject to a fine of $250.00.

Springfield resigned from the league at the end of 1926, having played 27 games, won 7, lost 13, and tied 7. The team had 21 points.

When Springfield withdrew, points for unplayed games were awarded as follows: Bethlehem, Philadelphia, and J&P Coats, six points each; New Bedford and Indiana Flooring, four points each; Fall River, Boston, New York Giants, and Brooklyn, 2 points each; Providence and Newark had completed their games with Springfield and therefore no points were awarded.

Year Seven - 1927-28 - A Split Schedule

The start of the 1927-28 season brought dramatic changes to the American Soccer League. The old single league 44-game championship, which had proved so successful, was scrapped in favor of a more ambitious split schedule with a playoff format. The first half of the season started in September and was scheduled to run until the end of the year. The winners and second-place team from the first half would then enter the playoffs, along with the first and second-place team from the second half of the season to start in February and end in late May or early June.

Once again there were to be twelve teams in the league, with a new franchise in Hartford, Connecticut, taking the place of the Springfield club. In another significant move, the old Indiana Flooring franchise was bought by Charles Stoneham, owner of the New York Giants baseball team, and renamed the New York Nationals.

Trouble came early, when the Philadelphia franchise, under new owner Fred McGuinness and made up almost totally of players brought in from Ireland, ran into financial trouble. By the middle of October, Philadelphia had collapsed and the players were dispersed throughout the league. Hartford, owned by ice cream magnate Albert Rocheleau, were also in trouble due to poor attendance and were asked by the league to voluntarily terminate their season to balance the league at ten teams. This they did; however, the results obtained in the schedule thus far were retained.

At the end of the first half of the schedule, Boston had finished on top of the league with Bethlehem and New Bedford tied for second. With a place in the playoffs at stake, this resulted in a special game, won by the Whalers. At the conclusion of the second half of the season, New Bedford were atop the league with Fall River in second place. Consequently Boston, New Bedford (which had qualified in both halves of the season) and Fall River were assured of playoff spots, while one spot remained open. It was decided that the third and fourth-place teams in the second half of the season, Bethlehem Steel and New York Nationals, would play for this spot, and Bethlehem won.

In the semifinals each team played the other at home and away, the team having the highest aggregate score being the winner. In the first leg Boston defeated Bethlehem 3-1 while New Bedford beat Fall River by the same score. In the return games, Bethlehem beat Boston 4-0 and Fall River edged New Bedford. Consequently Bethlehem had beaten Boston on a 5-3 aggregate and New Bedford had triumphed over Fall River 3-2, setting up a final between Bethlehem and New Bedford. Then another problem arose. In the second game Bethlehem, its goalkeeper injured, borrowed goalkeeper Steve Smith from the Brooklyn Wanderers without obtaining proper permission from the league, and the league overturned the result, awarding the game to Boston. This resulted in a single-game final between Boston, the first half winners, and New Bedford, the second half winners, which Boston took to win its only ASL championship. The final was played on June 12. The 1927-28 season had lasted for just over nine months.

During this season admission prices in Boston were 75 cents minimum and in New York City and Brooklyn, $1.10 minimum.

Final League Table - 1927-28

Champions - BOSTON WONDER WORKERS

First-Half Final League Standings

	P	W	L	T	GF	GA	Pts	Pct
Boston Wonder Workers	29	18	4	7	64	36	43	.741
Bethlehem Steel	29	18	6	5	70	49	41	.706
New Bedford Whalers	29	17	5	7	68	45	41	.706
Brooklyn Wanderers	29	13	7	9	68	50	35	.603

Newark Skeeters	30	7	20	3	46	77	17	.283
New York Nationals	30	7	20	3	41	77	17	.283

Boston were first-half champions and thus qualified for the end of season playoffs. Bethlehem and New Bedford tied for second place and therefore were required to play off for second place. In the play off New Bedford defeated Bethlehem 2-0.

Philadelphia Celtic started the season but were suspended by the league in October for financial reasons. Hartford Americans also started the season but were asked to resign when Philadelphia was suspended in order to balance the league.

Second-Half Final League Standings

	P	W	L	T	GF	GA	Pts	Pct
New Bedford Whalers	25	13	4	8	54	31	34	.680
Fall River Marksmen	26	15	6	5	62	32	35	.673

Brooklyn Wanderers	25	9	13	3	39	52	21	.420
J&P Coats	20	3	14	3	30	62	9	.225
Newark Skeeters	17	2	14	1	18	46	5	.147

With New Bedford having qualified for the playoffs twice, as champions of the second half and in second place in the first half, and with Boston and Fall River also qualifying, Bethlehem and New York Nationals was required to play off for the right to become the fourth team. Bethlehem defeated the Nationals and was required to play Boston in the semifinal while New Bedford met Fall River.

In the semifinals Bethlehem defeated Boston 5-3 on aggregate to qualify for the final, but were subsequently disqualified for playing an ineligible player. New Bedford beat Fall River 3-2 on aggregate in the other semifinal, and thus Boston and New Bedford met in the single game final with Boston winning 4-2 to take the Von Bremen Trophy.

Year Eight -1928-29 - The Soccer War

The 1928-29 season was the beginning of the end for the first American Soccer League. With soccer more popular than ever before in the United States, a bitter and protracted dispute arose between the league and the United States Football Association, which, along with what was to follow, destroyed much of the progress that had been made over the past seven seasons.

At the heart of the dispute was a problem that had arisen a number of times previously. The problem was that the league objected to the playing of games in the United States Open Cup competition during the league season. The ASL had been suspended by the USFA in the 1924-25 season for refusing to allow its teams to enter the competition, the league claiming that it disrupted the schedule and caused confusion.

Now the ASL wanted the cup competition played at the end of the ASL season, or its teams exempt until the season was over. The USFA refused. The league in its turn ordered its teams not to enter the competition, as it had done in 1924-25. However, three ASL teams, Bethlehem Steel, Newark Skeeters, and New York Giants, defied the league ruling and entered the Open Cup. Bill Cunningham, President of the ASL, said each team would be fined $1,000 and all franchise privileges would be suspended until they withdrew from the Challenge Cup.

The three teams appealed to the USFA, and President Armstrong Patterson of Detroit said, “Unless the American League rescinds the action in suspending New York Giants, Newark and Bethlehem within 24 hours drastic action will be taken against the league.” The ASL refused to rescind the action, and the American Soccer League was suspended.

While the ASL continued to operate as an outlaw league minus the three teams, the USFA was instrumental in forming a new league that included the three teams, playing in opposition to the ASL. This was the Eastern Soccer League and, in addition to Bethlehem, Newark, and the Giants, the new league included teams from the Southern New York State Association. This in its turn caused problems between the SNYSA and the USFA leading to the New York association teaming up with the ASL against the national body.

Meanwhile the ASL season continued at first with seven teams, there having been ten at the conclusion of the 1927-28 season, then with eight and, for a very brief period early in 1929, with nine. The eighth team in the league was once again a team from Philadelphia, while the ninth produced another shortlived (as in 1921-22) entry from Jersey City. In another bizarre twist late in the season, New Bedford jumped leagues, joining the Eastern Soccer League.

Once again the league championship was played in two halves. Since Fall River won both halves, there seemed little point in having a playoff, especially since the alliance with the Southern New York State Association had spawned a new competition for the old American Football Association Cup. The AFA Cup had last been played for in 1924, but its history dated all the way back to 1884.

Philadelphia FC	18	6	9	3	36	54	15	.417
Boston Wonder Workers	25	7	14	4	45	55	18	.360

*Dropped out in the middle of March and joined the Eastern Soccer League.

The J&P Coats franchise came under new management and was renamed the Pawtucket Rangers following the game against Brooklyn on March 23. Jersey City played briefly early in the second half of the season.

Since Fall River won both halves of the season, there was no need for a playoff.

Year Nine - 1929-30 - Peace Is Declared

The 1929-30 season in the American Soccer League opened with the league and the national governing body of the sport still at war and no resolution in sight. Six of the seven ASL teams operating at the end of the 1928-29 season were joined at the start of the 1929-30 season by the New Bedford Whalers. Disappointed at the quality of most of the opposition in the Eastern League, the Whalers moved back to the ASL while a new team named Brooklyn Hakoah was added. The seventh team of 1928-29, Philadelphia, had been replaced by a new team from Bridgeport, Connecticut. The Bridgeport experiment lasted a few short weeks and the team was moved back to Philadelphia.

Brooklyn Hakoah were formed by one group of players from the old Hakoah club of Vienna, Austria, who had migrated to the United States following the two Hakoah tours of 1926 and 1927. Another group of former Hakoah players was playing in the Eastern League as New York Hakoah.

The dispute between the USFA and the ASL was settled on October 9,1929, but the ASL operated normally up until the third week in October, at which point the schedule was abandoned with Fall River leading the league. For awhile, a loosely organized competition between some of the ASL teams and some of the ESL teams was played, which is referred to as a "round robin." Finally early in November play started in the new league, which was a compromise between the American Soccer League and the United States Football Association and was known as the Atlantic Coast League.

Final League Table -1929 Fall

Champions - FALL RIVER MARKSMEN

Brooklyn Hakoah	17	4	12	1	41	55	9	.265
Philadelphia FC	14	2	10	2	19	41	6	.214

Philadelphia started the season as the Bridgeport Bears, but the franchise was moved to Philadelphia in mid-September.

Fall River was leading the league on October 9 when league play was suspended and the American Soccer League merged with the Eastern Soccer League to become the Atlantic Coast League.

The 1930 Season

The decision to scrap the existing American Soccer League and Eastern Soccer League schedules brought about a change in the American Soccer League season. Instead of starting in September and playing through the winter to the following spring, the schedules had now been changed to two distinct halves, one in the spring and the other in the fall. In 1930 the spring season was the 1929-30 Atlantic Coast League, while in the fall the name had reverted to the American Soccer League again. Due to the fact that the league was made up of a substantially different number of clubs between the two halves, it is not possible to put the two halves of the season together in 1930. Therefore for the purposes of this book they have been separated into 1929-30 and 1930 (Fall). Because Fall River won both halves of the season once again, there was no playoff.

ENTER THE ATLANTIC COAST LEAGUE

The Atlantic Coast League was formed by a merger of some of the clubs in the American Soccer League and some of the clubs in the Eastern Soccer League. It emerged from the ruins of the soccer war which began in the fall of 1928, and it lasted for six months. However, essentially it was a case of putting the old American Soccer League, prewar, back together and saving some face. Bethlehem Steel and New York Giants rejoined their former colleagues in the ASL, Brooklyn Hakoah of the ASL and New York Hakoah of the ESL merged to become the Hakoah All Stars, and Bridgeport Hungaria from the ESL took the place of the old Newark franchise. During this time the Giants and Hakoah played their home games at Starlight Park, which was located at 177th Street and Tremont Avenue, in New York City, near the Third Avenue elevated train station.

During the time in which the New York Giants had been members of the Eastern Soccer League, the team's owner, Maurice Vandeweghe, had also owned 75% of the stock in the New York Hakoah club. However, under league rules one man could not own two clubs, and therefore Vandeweghe sold his shares in Hakoah to the Hakoah Sports Club.

The competition in the Atlantic Soccer League started in November and was completed at the end of April and was in fact the 1930 spring season. Early in the season Boston was required to drop out, since Sam Mark owned the Boston club as well as his Fall River Marksmen, and the league ruled that he could not own two clubs. Since new owners could not be found, Boston played just four games before dropping out. Bridgeport Hungaria had no more success in attracting fans than did the Bridgeport Bears earlier in 1929. A move to Newark after a short hiatus did nothing to help their cause.

In the end Fall River, once again, were the powerhouse, dominating the league and winning the championship. Previously the two halves of the season had been fall-spring; this had now been reversed to spring-fall separated by the summer break.

This summer was particularly significant, with the United States participating in the first FIFA World Cup held in Montevideo, Uruguay. Players from Atlantic Coast League clubs dominated the American team, which was good enough to reach the semifinals before injuries took their toll. But the national team was not the only American team in South America; the Hakoah All Stars also went south. Fall River went to Europe, playing in Czechoslovakia, Austria, and Hungary.

Back to the American Soccer League -1930 (Fall)

By the fall of 1930, the Atlantic Coast League had reverted to its old American Soccer League title, but during the summer one of the greatest teams in American soccer history had become a victim of the soccer wars and the deepening economic depression. Bethlehem Steel, a major force in American soccer since winning its first national championship in 1915, was no more. Many of the players moved on to a new team called the Newark Americans. There was also another bizzare transfer in ownership as the New York Giants franchise was sold to the Soccer Exhibition Company of New York to become the New York Soccer Club. Yet the name Giants remained in the league, since Charles Stoneham changed the name of his New York Nationals to match the name of his baseball team, New York Giants.

Fall River, in Europe when the season began, had a lot of catching up to do when the team returned home. The season started in early September, but the Marksmen did not play their first game until one month later. But they still won what had become the second half of the 1930 championship, once again eliminating the need for a playoff.

Final League Table -1930 (Fall). Second Half of the 1929-30 Season.

The Fall River franchise was moved to New York in the Spring of 1931 and merged with New York Soccer Club to become the New York Yankees. However, the team entered the Open Cup as Fall River and was required to continue playing as Fall River even though the team had moved prior to the eastern final and the national final.

"AMERICAN MENACE" AROUSES THE SCOTS

Scottish Football Association Peeved at the Invasion of the Team Owners From States —To Punish Players Who Break Contracts

GLASGOW, Scotland, Aug. 31.—The Scottish Football Association Council is not pleased with the attitude of the U. S. F. A., regarding registered professional players who are engaged in American football, and at the first meeting of the new council at Glasgow, 19th August, they metaphorically grasped the Scottish equivalent to an Irish shillelagh with which to punch the heads of the rulers of the soccer game in U. S. A.

Known in Scotland as the "American Menace," this question of signed or retained players crossing the Atlantic and engaging in football has fairly put the wind up football legislators in Scotland. It is making them hollow eyed, miserable, dyspeptic-looking, and is responsible for loss of sleep and appetite—so far as solids are concerned. It is all very sad and very distressing to see the rows of wrinkles guthering on the faces of those who control the game here.

But they are determined to deal drastically with players when they return to Scotland and try to again take part in the game. How they are to do this is not yet known—hence the furrowed brows and the dejected faces of the soccer bosses. Whew- It's warm-

At their meeting the S. F. A. hear a letter read from the U. S. F. A. dated 5th August, 1925, in which it was stated that the U. S. association had set forth their attitude in a letter sent in February this year, but so far the S. F. A. did not seem prepared to accept the American definition of a cantract, and that in the circumptances the American F. A. preferred to continue as before.

This was putting the cat among the pigeons with a vengeance. The members looked serious, scratched their heads and looked for some fellow to come along with a brain wave. But brain waves were not on the menu this sitting. And they looked even more embarrassed when as a further proof of how players were defying the jurisdiction of the S. F.A. it was mentioned that a Partick Thistle player, Hugh Collins, who was on loan to Queen of the South, a Second League team, had left that club in the lurch, Saturday 15th August by sailing for America, although he had been paid about $180 from Queen of the South and about $200 from aPrtick Thistle as close season wages.

Another player, Robert Blair, Helensburgh F. C., had left for America long with Collins, and the clubs concerned were angry. They asked the S. F. A. to frame some new rule which would prevent players of that type acting as they did. Some teaser of a problem that! Even President Tom White, who is a lawyer, seemed at a loss what really to do. He thought they should delay coming to any decision, as under the present rules they had not sufficient powers. And how would they feel if they suspended players and then found when these players returned from America that they had no power to suspenr them? More head scratching.

What is troubling the Scottish legislators is that the rule whereby a professional whose engagement is terminated as an amateur applies only to Great Britain and Northern Ireland. They wish this rule to apply in every other country, but on this matter the U. S. F. A. will not agree.

And what are the players who left Scotland and are now playing soccer in their new country thinking of the "American Menace?" Many of them must be laughing at the dilemma their action has placed the bosses of the game in Scotland.

But the S. F. A. are grimly determined to punish severely players who jacked their grips and sailed across the Atlantic after being a signed player or on the retired list, although how they are to do it is just about as easy as a simple country youth trying to "find the lady" with experienced card sharpers.

There will be a lot of hard and deep thinking between now and the next council meeting in Glasgow, but whether anything will be evolved which will meet the situation seems to be in the lap of the gods. At present it is not in the hands of the Scottish soccer boss

Newspaper article in the Fall River Globe (August 1925) concerning the "American Menace."

The 1931 Season (Spring)

As in 1930, the American Soccer League championship was played in two separate halves in the spring and the fall. Once again there was a considerable turnover in clubs between the two halves, and as a result it requires that the records be kept separate, even though it was one complete season. The New York Giants won the spring half of the schedule and New Bedford Whalers the fall. This led to a memorable final played over two games early in 1932 in which New Bedford took a seemingly unassailable 8-3 lead in the first game, played in New Bedford, only to have the Giants come back in the second leg in New York to win 6-0 and take the title on a 9-8 aggregate score.

THE MARKSMEN BECOME THE YANKEES

There were nine teams in the spring of 1931, although some of those teams seemed to play a very reduced schedule. Sadly, just as the summer of 1930 had seen the demise of Bethlehem Steel, the winter of 1931 marked the end of another great team, the Fall River Marksmen. With the depression reducing attendances in Fall River and affecting revenues, Sam Mark reluctantly decided to gamble, and unfortunately the gamble, as did so many at that time, failed.

Always a draw in New York City, Mark gambled on moving his great team south and merging it with the New York Soccer Club, hoping that the combination would bring in the fans. The deal was signed on February 16, 1931, and the new team became known as the New York Yankees.

At the same time Sam Mark let it be known that anyone who wished to form a new Fall River team was welcome to make use of the now vacant Mark's Stadium in Tiverton. Soon a group of Fall River businessmen headed by former star center forward Harold Brittan, and including Messrs. Stockman and Clifton, had bought the Providence franchise and moved it to Fall River. Toward the middle of the season New Bedford became victims of the depression when Ike Dawson, who had taken over the ownership of the Whalers some time before, became convinced that it was impossible to run the team on a paying basis, and merged the team with Fall River, becoming a part owner of the club.

Unfortunately the Yankees were only partially successful in New York City: the depression was hitting everything and everyone, and revenues at the gate were no better there than in Fall River. For the first time in a long time, Sam Mark's team did not win the ASL championship, the title for the spring season being won by the other New York team, the Giants. The Yankees did, however, win the national championship, even though the record books show the winners as being Fall River. Having entered the Open Cup under that name, the former Marksmen were required to continue playing under that name.

The 1931 Season (Fall)

The American Soccer League had a strange look in the fall of 1931 since for the first time there was no team from Fall River. The new team in the “Spindle City” being no more successful financially than the old, the club folded. Meanwhile, Sam Mark, his New York enterprise a failure, moved his team to New Bedford and in the process obtained the rights to the players from the failed Fall River team. Thus in effect the New Bedford Whalers in the fall of 1931 were a combination of the old Fall River, Providence, and New Bedford teams.

Seven teams formed the league in the fall of 1931, the famous old Brooklyn Wanderers team also having failed. The new boys in the league were the New York Americans, later to become a force for many years in the second edition of the American Soccer League.

The powerful New Bedford club won the second half of the 1931 season and in the spring of 1932 the national championship. But in the playoff for the 1931 ASL crown, they were defeated by the spring champion New York Giants in a series that was worthy of the ASL in its glory days. The Whalers, playing at home, won the first game handily by a score of eight goals to three. Very few people would have bet on the Giants in the return game in New York, but in an amazing turnaround the Giants won 6-0 to take the title on a 9-8 aggregate score. Perhaps it was a fitting end to what had once been a league full of promise for the future of soccer in the United States.

Final League Table - 1931 (Fall)

	P	W	L	T	GF	GA	Pts	Pct
New Bedford Whalers	21	14	5	2	60	34	30	.714

The Second American Soccer League —1932-1990

The final game of the season in the American Soccer League of 1931 between the New York Giants and New Bedford Whalers in reality marked the end of the "first" American Soccer League. The league was in disarray by the spring of 1932, recovered somewhat in the fall, then staggered into 1933.

In the fall of 1932 the ASL contained the following teams: Fall River Football Club, Pawtucket Rangers, New York Americans, New York Field Club, Brooklyn Wanderers, Hakoah All Stars, Queens Bohemians, New Bedford Whalers, and Boston Bears. Fall River, now playing at Bigberry Stadium in Fall River, won what was termed the first half of the 1932-33 season.

However, by the time the spring of 1933 rolled around, the league had a completely different look. In the spring the ASL was made up of New York Brookhattan, Queens Bohemians, Brooklyn Wanderers, New York Americans, and Prague Americans. Brookhatten won what was termed the first half of the 1933 season.

But by the fall the league had been completely reorganized and the "second" American Soccer League had come into being. Much of the credit for this belongs to four people, Erno Schwarz, Bill Low, Edward Duffy, and Peter Flannery.

In that first season of the second ASL the teams reverted to the old pattern with the season beginning in the fall and the teams playing through the winter and into the spring.

The revamped ASL in the 1933-34 season contained teams from New York, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania. Gone were the great teams from New England. The Irish-Americans from New Jersey were the first champions, finishing ahead of the New York Americans, Brooklyn Celtics, Newark Americans, Kearny Scots-Americans, Brooklyn Football Club, Philadelphia German-Americans, New York Brookhattan, and New York Hispano.

While not enjoying the high profile of the original ASL, the second ASL stayed alive and kept the game alive, through many difficult times, often adjusting to the circumstances of the time, until it finally fell apart in 1983.

A third version of the league began operating in 1988, eventually fully merging with the Western Soccer League in 1991 to form the American Professional Soccer League.

PLAYER REGISTER

This register, in addition to listing the clubs each player played for in the American Soccer League, lists, where known, each player's date and place of birth. Also, where known, the register lists:

a. the clubs he played for before coming to the ASL
b. the clubs played for after he left the ASL.
c. if he left the ASL, returned, and left again

Where possible, positions have been listed.

The first set of figures are a player's appearances, the second set the goals a player scored. The first and second sets are broken into three separate columns. The first column represents games played in the American Soccer League, the second set games played in the U.S. Open Cup, and the third set games played in the ASL or Lewis Cup. The same applies to the goalscoring column. The following is an example.

JONES, John - Fullback

	Season	Appearances			Goals
Fall River	24-25	44	2	2	10	1	1

In a number of cases it has not been possible to find players' first names, or in the case of players with last names such as Brown and Campbell, for example, where first names are not known, to determine if they are connected to any of the other Browns or Campbells listed. In these cases the players appear under a "general" heading.

In some cases the acronym ESL is used at the end of a line. This refers to where players left the ASL at the start of the soccer war and moved to the Eastern Soccer League.

Further explanations of some of the references used for clubs and leagues in this listing are to be found in the Glossary.

BIOGRAPHIES OF OUTSTANDING ASL PLAYERS AND ADMINISTRATORS

ABDALLAH, Tewfik

Abdallah was the second Egyptian-born player to play in the Football League when he made his debut for Derby County against Manchester City in 1920. He later moved on to play in Scotland for Cowdenbeath in 1922 and, following a time back in England with Hartlepools United, joined Providence for the start of the 1924-25 season. Nicknamed "Toothpick," Abdallah played for Fall River, Hartford, and New York Nationals in addition to Providence. He also played for the American Soccer League team against Uruguay in 1927 and in Canada for Montreal Carsteel.

AGAR, Nathan

A lifelong soccer enthusiast, Nathan Agar was born and played soccer in England before coming to the United States. He organized his first American club in 1905, known as the Critchleys, the team playing at Coney Island in the New York League. In 1911 he was chosen for the all-New York State team that played against the famous English amateur club called the Corinthians. Eventually he formed the famous Brooklyn Wanderers team that entered the ASL in 1922, and was partly responsible for bringing the Vienna Hakoah team to the United States in 1926. He even played some games for the Wanderers in the early years of the ASL and was owner-manager throughout the team's existence. In 1925 he managed the U.S. national team in its games against Canada and also played a role in the formation of the United States Football Association in 1913. Nathan Agar, a certified chartered accountant, died in New York City on June 24,1978, aged 90.

ALLAN, Jock

Jock joined the Football League club Bury on May 10, 1913, from the Scottish club East Fife and remained with the Lancashire team until he was suspended for life by the English Football Association on May 29, 1923, for his part in a bribery scandal. The scandal involved players and officials from Bury and Coventry City. However, by the time the suspension was handed down, Allan had already left England and joined J&P Coats of Pawtucket. A fullback, Allan played three full seasons for the "Threadmen."

AULD, Andy

Born in Stevenston, Scotland, Auld, who was known to his teammates as "Dasher," played for junior clubs Ardeer Thistle and Parkhead Juniors, before coming to the United States in 1922. Awing half or an inside forward, he represented the United States in the World Cup of 1930. Between 1924 and 1930 he played regularly for Providence, and then briefly for Fall River when the franchise was moved. Later he signed with the Pawtucket Rangers and appeared in the U.S. Open Cup Final of 1934. Auld was inducted into the National Soccer Hall of Fame in 1986.

BALLANTYNE, Johnny

A highly talented inside forward, Ballantyne caused a stir in Scotland when he jumped his contract with Partick Thistle to sign with Boston in the spring of 1924. What particularly upset the Scots is that Ballantyne was alleged to have accepted closed-season wages before signing for Boston. Ballantyne's move was the first in a number of controversial signings made by ASL clubs, signings that led to bad feelings between the Scottish Football Association and the United States Football Association. Ballantyne played three full seasons with Boston, becoming one of the league's top players, before returning to Scotland to play once again for Partick Thistle and later in England for the London club Queens Park Rangers.

BATTLES, Barney

Born in Scotland, the son of a famous Scottish player, Battles came to the United States as a young man with no first-class experience. He played for one of the local clubs at Sullivan Square in Boston and was soon spotted by a scout for the Boston club in the ASL. With the Wonder Workers he found himself in a team of very experienced Scottish players and at first saw little action. Despite this he was selected to play for the United States against Canada in Montreal in 1925, at inside forward. However, with Boston he was slowly fitted into the team at right half and then finally at center forward, and it was in this position that he played against the Glasgow Rangers in Boston in 1928. Barney's performance that day led him to seek a trial in Scotland, and he was quickly signed by one of his father's former clubs, Hearts. Almost immediately he won a place in the attack of the famous old Scottish club and soon after was selected to represent the Scottish League against the Irish League at Firhill Park in Glasgow. To say that he arrived with a bang is an understatement, for the boy from Boston scored five of the eight goals rung up by the Scottish League on that day He scored another four against the Irish League a year later and three more the following year in his fourth appearance for the League team. This led to his winning a full international cap against Wales in 1931, when he scored Scotland's only goal in a 1-1 tie.

BEST, Jeremiah

Known as Jerry, Best began his career with the Mickley Colliery club in NorthEast England, then moved on to Newcastle United and Leeds United before crossing the Atlantic, where he became one of the top goalscorers in the ASL, first with Providence, and then with New Bedford. Used mainly as an outside left early in his career, he was switched, with great success, to center forward in the Fall of 1930, when he scored four goals in one game twice and five against the New York Giants on December 6. With the collapse of the ASL, Best returned to England to play first for Clapton Orient, then Darlington, and finally Hull City. He also toured Austria, Czechoslovakia, and Hungary in 1930 as a guest player with Fall River.

BLACK, Jimmy

A highly promising wing half, Jimmy began his senior career with Cowdenbeath in 1923. He stayed at Central Park for three seasons before responding to the lure of American soccer and signing with the newly formed Springfield Babes in 1926.

When the Springfield club folded at the end of that year, Black's registration was transferred to Providence, something he objected to. After completing the season with the Clamdiggers, Black returned to Scotland and signed for Aberdeen. However, Black's registration was still held by Providence. This led to a bitter dispute between the Scottish F.A. and the USFA and resulted in his suspension. However, when the dispute was over Black had five outstanding seasons at Pittodrie and is regarded as one of the finest wing halves in the club's history.

BLAIR, Bobby

Blair was the subject of much discussion at Scottish F.A. headquarters when he left home in the summer of 1925 to play for Boston. At the time it was alleged that Bobby had jumped his contract with Third Division Helensburgh. A center forward of considerable promise, Blair soon made his presence felt in the ASL, scoring 36 goals in his first season and 41 in his second. Altogether Blair scored 131 goals in his ASL career, placing him among the league's top all-time goalscorers.

BLAIR, Danny

Although he was born in Scotland, Blair studied agriculture and farming as a young man in both Ireland and Canada, playing soccer in both countries. In Canada he played for three different Toronto clubs before moving to the United States in 1924 to sign for Providence. After just one season with the Rhode Island club, it was back to Scotland, where he played briefly for Parkhead Juniors before signing with the Scottish League club Clyde. At Shawfield, Blair, who stood just five-foot-six and one-half inch tall, and wore size five boots, quickly made his presence felt and was capped seven times by Scotland at left back between 1929 and 1931. Then in November 1931 Danny moved south to sign for Aston Villa. Despite his size, he got up well to head the ball, was a fine positional player and a fierce tackler. After a slow start at Villa Park, he soon became a favorite and added one more Scottish cap to his collection. In June 1936 he was transferred to Blackpool, retiring there in 1950 to become a market gardener.

BLAIR, Thomas

A top-class goalkeeper, Tommy Blair began his first-class career with Kilmarnock, where he played from 1912 until he joined Manchester City in 1920. However, his stay at Maine Road was short and he was soon on his way to Canada, where he played in Edmonton and on Vancouver Island for awhile.

His ASL career began in 1925 with Boston and continued with spells at Fall River, Hartford, New Bedford, and J&P Coats. It was while he was with Fall River that a story circulated in the English press that he had returned to Britain, penniless, having worked his passage back across the Atlantic. As this story circulated in Britain, Blair was still enjoying his soccer with Fall River. Later he did in fact return to Britain, playing for Ayr United in the Scottish League and Linfield in the Irish League.

BRAUN, Jozsef

A halfback, Braun played 27 times for his native Hungary before coming to the United States in 1929 to play for Brooklyn Hakoah. He made his international debut on October 6, 1918, against Austria, and between then and his last international appearance in 1926, played in the 1924 Olympic Games in Paris. In Hungary he played for MTK Budapest, and in addition to playing for Hakoah in the ASL he also played for the Brooklyn Wanderers.

BREWSTER, George

Born at Culsalmond, near Aberdeen, Brewster made his debut for the Dons in 1913, but during the war years guested for Falkirk. After World War I ended, he went back to Pittodrie, where his play soon attracted the attention of the English club Everton. Brewster's play at center half for Everton quickly drew the attention of the Scottish selectors and he played for Scotland against England in 1921. However, Brewster could not be certain of a first-team place at Goodison Park, finding himself in competition with Tom Fleetwood. Quite often Brewster would only play when it was necessary to switch Fleetwood to right half. Not happy with this situation, Brewster moved on to the Wolves late in 1922 and from there to Lovell's Athletic and Wallasey United. His spell with Brooklyn Wanderers in the ASL was brief, and he returned to Scotland to become player-manager of Inverness.

BRITTAN, Harold

One of the most outstanding and influential players, particularly in the early years of the ASL, Brittan came to the United States from the London club Chelsea. There he had shown a great deal of potential that was never realized and after his career had been interrupted by illness and the outbreak of World War I, he moved to the United States. At first he played for Bethlehem Steel and then in the first year of the ASL led Philadelphia to the championship. The following year Fall River owner Sam Mark signed him and, with Brittan leading the attack, the Marksmen won the ASL championship in 1923-24,1924-25 and 1925-26. In 1924 the Marksmen also won the U.S. Open Cup. Strangely enough Mark allowed Brittan to go to arch rivals New Bedford at the start of the 1926-27 season, but he never really settled down at Battery Park and, after turning down a move to Providence late in 1926, decided to retire. By this time Brittan owned a very successful automobile dealership in Fall River and didn't want to move any distance away from the city. The Marksmen, however, were successful in luring him out of retirement in spring 1927, and he led the attack in the final as Fall River once again captured the U.S. Open Cup. Following the 1927-28 season Brittan really did retire to devote his interests to business, but he came back into the Fall River picture again in the spring of 1931, putting together a group of businessmen to buy the Providence franchise after Sam Mark had moved his Marksmen to New York City. Harold Brittan was inducted into the National Soccer Hall of Fame in 1951.

BROWN, David

One of the finest native-born center forwards ever produced in the United States, Brown was born in East Newark, New Jersey, in 1898. Ironically in a position usually dominated by big men, Brown stood just five foot three. He began his career with a series of New Jersey teams: Ford, West Hudson, Paterson, and then Erie. He began his ASL career with Harrison, but really attracted national attention for his performances with the New York Giants. During the 1926-27 season Davie scored 52 goals in 38 games to lead the league in scoring, and during the course of his ASL career scored a total of 189 goals. During his record 1926-27 season Brown scored 21 goals in nine games during the month of October. On November 21, Brown scored another five against Providence. He made three appearances for the United States, two against Canada in 1925 at outside right, and against Canada again in 1926, this time at center forward, he scored three times in the three games. Injury kept him out of the 1930 U.S. World Cup team, but he did go overseas to play as a guest player for Bethlehem Steel on its Scandinavian tour in 1919-20. Davie Brown was inducted into the National Soccer Hall of Fame in 1951.

BROWN, James

Born in Kilmarnock, Ayrshire, on the west coast of Scotland, Brown grew up in the nearby town of Troon. He came to the United States as an 18-year-old in 1927 and played for the Bayonne Rovers in New Jersey before joining Newark in the ASL and then moving on to the New York Giants. Brown quickly made an impression at outside right and was selected to the United States team to play in the first World Cup held in Montevideo, Uruguay in 1930. Brown played in all three games in that competition, including the semifinal where he scored the only American goal. Upon returning to the United States, he had an outstanding season with New York Soccer Club, then Brooklyn Wanderers and Newark Americans before moving to Britain. There he played with great success for Manchester United before moving on to Brentford and Tottenham Hotspur. At the end of World War II, Brown returned to the United States to live in Connecticut, where he played alongside his son, George, for Greenport United. He also coached Greenwich High School for 22 years and the Polish Falcons in the ASL in 1957 and 1958. Jimmy Brown was inducted into the National Soccer Hall of Fame in 1986.

BURNESS, Gordon

Numerous soccer players have appeared in internationals for two countries, but none are quite like Gordon Burness. Born in Scotland, Burness played for Canada against the United States at Ebbets Field in Brooklyn on November 8,1925. Almost one year later, to the day, he was in the United States lineup playing against Canada on the same field. They were the only two internationals that Burness played. He did, however, have an outstanding ASL career after joining the Brooklyn Wanderers in 1925 from the Toronto Scottish. Burness, usually appearing at outside right, had his greatest success playing in the great Boston lineup of those years but also played for New Bedford, Pawtucket, Fall River, and the New York Yankees, winning a U.S. Open Cup medal in 1931 as a member of the Fall River/New York Yankees team. Gordon's brother Harry also had a notable ASL career, mostly with Boston. Sadly Gordon was killed on the Normandy beaches on D-Day 1944 as part of the allied forces.

CAHILL, Thomas

Perhaps the single most important administrator in United States soccer for many years, Cahill was instrumental in forming the American Soccer League and in the early years was its secretary. As secretary of the American Amateur Association in 1913 he played a major role in forming the United States Football Association, the first national governing body of the sport, and getting the organization recognized by FIFA. Cahill was Executive Secretary of the USFA from 1913 to 1921, again in 1923 and 1924, and served a third term from 1928 to 1930.

CAMERON, Jimmy

After playing soccer in his youth in his native Inverness, Jimmy moved to London for a year, playing for Mitcham Athletic, but soon after that war broke out and very quickly he was drafted into the army Some of the best footballers in Britain were in the army in those days, and soon Cameron was in the regimental team, at first in Armentieres, and then in Salonika. When hostilities ended Jimmy Cameron received offers from Hearts, St. Mirren, Dundee, and Aberdeen. Finally he signed for Hearts and then in 1926 crossed the Atlantic to play for Indiana Flooring, the New York Nationals, and finally the New York Giants.

CAMPBELL, Dugald

Known to everyone as "Dougie," Campbell played outside right in the great Fall River teams. He was born in Paisley, Scotland, but came to the United States with his parents as a youth. He first played for Bethlehem Steel and then joined Fall River in time for the 1923-24 season. While with the Marksmen, he was a member of the championship winning teams of 1923-24, 1924-25, and 1925-26 seasons. Dougie also played on the teams that won the U.S. Open Cup in 1924 and 1927, earning a salary of $50 a week. Campbell left Fall River early in the 1928 season and joined the New York Giants, who were then playing in the Eastern Soccer League. With the Giants he earned $55 a week. Later in life Campbell was employed as a builder, was in a shellfish business, and operated a cranberry bog in West Creek, New Jersey.

CARLSON, Herbert

A Swedish international inside forward, Carlson, who went by the nickname of "Murren," played 20 times for Sweden between 1918 and 1922 and was the top goalscorer in the 1920 Olympic Games in Antwerp. Carlson played his club soccer for IFK Goteborg (Gothenburg) before moving to New York to play for the Viking Athletic Club. From Viking he joined the team of the Indiana Flooring Company of New York, a team with strong connections to Scandinavia. Carlson remained with Indiana Flooring from 1924 until 1927, becoming one of the leading inside forwards in the American Soccer League. Then in the summer of 1927 he toured Scandinavia with New York Viking and did not return to the United States until the spring of 1928. Then he joined the New York Nationals and stayed with them until the team folded in the spring of 1930. His playing rights then passed to the New York Giants, and he played for that club through the 1930 Fall season and throughout the entire 1931 season when the Giants won the ASL championship in a dramatic playoff with New Bedford.

CHEDGZOY, Sam

Born in Ellesmere Port, Cheshire, on the River Mersey, Sam soon crossed the river to Liverpool to play for Everton. From 1910 until 1926, Chedgzoy was one of the greatest wingers in the English game, and he played eight times for England between 1920 and 1925. A speedy winger, he was a good dribbler and could cross the ball with the best of them. Sam was also responsible for a change in the laws of the game. In 1924, shortly after the law had been changed to allow a player to score direct from a corner kick, he found a loophole in the rule, and during a match against Tottenham Hotspur at White Hart Lane in London, dribbled the ball along the goal line from a corner kick and hammered the ball into the net as the other players looked on in amazement. The referee had no choice but to award a goal, even though the intent of the rule was that a player should only play the ball once.

Chedgzoy came to Canada in 1924 to coach and returned to North America in 1926 to play for New Bedford. He played for the Whalers from 1926 until 1930, when he took up residence in Montreal and played and coached the local Carsteel team.

CRILLEY, Willy

The diminutive Crilley, often referred to as Wee Willy Crilley, still holds the record for the most goals scored in one season by a player for Scottish club Alloa Athletic. Crilley scored 49 goals for the Scottish Second Division team during the 1921-22 season before moving on to play for Celtic. However, his stay at Parkhead was short and soon he had crossed the Atlantic, where he played for New York Football Club from 1922 to 1924. From that point on Crilley moved around a lot, playing not only in the ASL but also in the various leagues in and around New York. Finally in the 1930s he moved back to Scotland to play once again for Alloa, later returning to the United States for the second time where, on November 18, 1942, he joined the forces and served with the 15th Air Force.

DICK, Walter

A member of the United States World Cup team in 1934, Walter Dick was born in Scotland and came to North America when was 17 years old. Playing soccer in Niagara Falls, he was spotted by Sam Fletcher, the manager of the Providence team in the ASL, and quickly signed. Dick played regularly for Providence for five seasons before moving on to Fall River and then Pawtucket where, as a member of the Pawtucket Rangers, he played in the U.S. Open Cup Finals of 1934 and 1935. Walter Dick was inducted into the National Soccer Hall of Fame in 1989.

DONALD, Alec

Donald joined Indiana Flooring in 1926 from Scottish club Partick Thistle and soon developed into one of the finest fullbacks in the ASL. At the end of the 1926-27 season, when the ownership of the Indiana franchise changed hands, he returned to Scotland and signed for Hearts along with Harry Chatton, another Indiana player. However, as both players registrations were still held by the New York Nationals franchise, the move to Scotland was declared illegal and both players returned to the U.S. to become members of the Nationals Open Cup winning team of 1928. Donald did eventually move back to Britain to play, signing for London club Chelsea, where he played in the 1930-31 and the early part of the 1931-32 seasons.

DOUGLAS, Jimmy

Born in East Newark, New Jersey, Douglas rarely seemed to settle down with one club, despite being one of the best goalkeepers of his day. In 1924 he kept goal for the United States in the Paris Olympics and in 1925 was in goal when the United States played Canada in Montreal. However, his greatest claim to fame came in 1930 when, as a member of the United States World Cup team, he played three games in the first World Cup held in Montevideo, Uruguay. There in the semifinal against Argentina he was badly injured early in the game but played on in a losing cause. His career in the ASL took him to Harrison, Newark, New York Giants, Fall River, Brooklyn, Philadelphia, New York Nationals, and New York Americans. Jimmy Douglas was inducted into the National Soccer Hall of Fame in 1954.

DOYLE, Dinny

A wing half, Dinny played for the Republic of Ireland against Italy in Turin on March 21, 1926, his only international appearance. At the time he was a regular member of the famous Dublin team, Shamrock Rovers. In the summer of 1927 Doyle, along with a number of other well-known Irish players, signed for the new Irish club in Philadelphia, to be known as Philadelphia Celtic. Unfortunately, despite having formed what appeared to be a team to challenge for the championship, owner Fred McGuiness had financial problems and the league operated the team for awhile before it folded. A dispute ensued over the rights to the players and eventually Doyle became a Fall River player. An outstanding player, Dinny played with distinction for the Marksmen at both wing half and center half from 1927 to 1930 when he moved on to Pawtucket and then to the short-lived New York Yankees.

EISENHOFFER, Jozsef

A Hungarian international winger who had played in the 1924 Olympics in Paris, Eisenhoffer came to the United States in 1926 as a member of the Austrian champion Vienna Hakoah club. He was quickly signed by the Brooklyn Wanderers and remained with that club for most of his ASL career, apart from a spell with Hakoah. Eisenhoffer could play at inside left, outside left, and left half and also scored his share of goals. He was one of the outstanding players of his time. When the ASL fell apart Eisenhoffer went to France, where he played with distinction for Olympique Marseille, appearing in the French Cup Finals of 1934 and 1935.

FERGUSON, John

Known to everyone as Jock, Ferguson starred for the great Bethlehem Steel teams prior to 1920 and his career was winding down in the early years of the ASL. Ferguson first crossed the Atlantic in 1912, having played for Arbroath, St. Johnstone, and Dundee, and then the English club Leeds City. From the point at which he joined the great steel club, Jock missed only one cup tie game in eight seasons, played in five U.S. national finals and five American Cup Finals. He made the trip to Sweden with Bethlehem Steel in 1919. When the ASL opened in 1921-22 Ferguson played for Philadelphia and won a championship medal again the following season as a member of the J&P Coats team. He then returned to Bethlehem Steel for 1923-24 and remained with the Steelmen until 1928 in a backup role. Jock Ferguson was inducted into the National Soccer Hall of Fame in 1950.

FISCHER, Lajos

Fischer was a Hungarian international goalkeeper who played nine times for his country between 1924 and 1926 when he joined the Brooklyn Wanderers. Fischer played for the Vienna Athletic Club before coming to the United States, and his ASL career took him from Brooklyn to the New York Giants and then on to Hakoah.

FLEMING, Tommy

“Whitey” Fleming was one of the outstanding wingers of his day. Born in Beith in Ayrshire, he played for his local team in the Ayrshire Cup final of 1906-07 before crossing the ocean. In the U.S. he joined the Fore River club of Quincy, Massachusetts, but after playing for a number of years in the New England League was encouraged to return to Scotland, where he joined Morton. Back in the United States, again he joined Bethlehem Steel and then was a member of the Philadelphia and J&P Coats teams when they won the ASL championship in 1921-22 and 1922-23 respectively. For the start of the 1924 season he moved from Pawtucket to the newly formed Boston team and quickly added to his reputation by playing in a team of established Scottish stars.

FLETCHER, Sam

Born in Manchester, England, in 1890, Sam Fletcher played in the Manchester and District League until coming to Canada in 1910. In Hamilton he played for the Independent Labour Party Team, Hamilton Lancashire, and then in Niagara Falls for the Rangers. In October 1914 he joined Bethlehem Steel, where he played for seven seasons, partnering Jock Ferguson at fullback. In 1919 he went to Scandinavia on tour with Bethlehem Steel. In the ASL Sam played for Harrison and Newark before joining the new Providence franchise in 1924. At Providence he was both a player and a manager, and the Providence Clamdiggers were often referred to as "The Fletchermen" in those years. In 1925, in addition to coaching the Clamdiggers, he also became coach of Brown University in Providence, a position he held for 20 years. In the early 1930s Sam Fletcher was also secretary of the American Soccer League.

FLORIE, Tom

Captain of the very successful United States World Cup team in 1930, Tom Florie was born in Harrison, New Jersey, in 1897 of Italian parents. He grew up playing the game on the sandlots of his hometown and in 1924 joined the new Providence team in the ASL. Florie, playing at inside forward or on the wing, was an instant success with the Clamdiggers and was a regular for five seasons. Moving to New Bedford in 1928, he continued his outstanding career with the Whalers and was a member of the New Bedford team that won the U.S. Open Cup in 1932. Shortly afterwards he signed for Pawtucket Rangers where he was on the losing side in the Open Cup Final of 1934. In addition to playing for the United States in the World Cup of 1930 he also played in the World Cup of 1934 and against Canada in 1925 and 1926. Tom Florie was inducted into the National Soccer Hall of Fame in 1986.

FRYER, Bill

A halfback who played for a number of teams in the ASL from 1921 to 1932, Fryer came to the United States from the English club Barnsley in 1921. He played at first for Todd Shipyards in Brooklyn and then moved on to Paterson, New York Giants, Fall River, Brooklyn Wanderers, and Newark Americans. With Todd's he played in the U.S. Open Cup Final of 1922, but really made his name as a member of the great Fall River teams from 1923 to 1927. Bill Fryer was inducted into the National Soccer Hall of Fame in 1951.

FULLAM, Bob

A center forward who played for the Republic of Ireland twice, both times against Italy, in 1926 and 1927, Fullam was one of a number of Irishmen who came to the United States to play for Philadelphia Celtic in the fall of 1927. When the team went under for financial reasons, despite a promising start, Fullam played briefly for Holley Carburetors in Detroit before returning to Ireland to rejoin

Shamrock Rovers. Before coming to the United States, Bob had played for Olympic, Shamrock Rovers, Shelbourne, and then briefly in England for Leeds United.

GALLAGHER, James

Gallagher could play right half and outside right with equal effectiveness, but it was at right half that he played with great distinction for the United States in the World Cup of 1930. Born in Scotland, Gallagher first made a name for himself with Indiana Flooring and then with the New York Nationals when Charles Stoneham bought the Indiana franchise. For a total of seven seasons he was one of the top players in the league, eventually moving on to play for Cleveland Slavia, where he was selected to the U.S. World Cup team of 1934. Jim Gallagher was inducted into the National Soccer Hall of Fame in 1986.

GIBSON, Dave

One of a number of players in the ASL who began their first-class careers with Kilmarnock, Gibson moved to England late in 1925 to play for Preston North End after playing 247 games for the Ayrshire club. Following a brief career with Preston he crossed the ocean to play for the new Springfield club in the 1926-27 season. However, when Springfield folded at the end of 1926 he became the property of Fall River. Once again his stay was short, and following a dispute with the Fall River owner he started the 1927-28 season with Providence. There he settled down to become one of the top fullbacks in the league and also to become a professional golfer at the Montaup Golf Club in Portsmouth, Rhode Island. His U.S. career over, Dave returned to Scotland in May 1932 to play for Queen of the South.

GILCHRIST, John

A player of outstanding ability and renowned as superb passer of the ball, Gilchrist's career was unfortunately marred by repeated clashes with club management. He began his first-class career with Celtic and was capped for Scotland against England in 1922, the year he helped Celtic win the Scottish League championship. A brilliant career appeared in the offing, yet a clash with the Celtic officials led to his transfer to Preston North End in January 1923. After just 19 games at Deepdale and another clash with management, he was transfer listed and moved on to Carlisle United and then Third Lanark before crossing the Atlantic to play for the Brooklyn Wanderers. Here again his stay was short, lasting just six games.

GILLESPIE, Tom

Following a mediocre career in Britain with Hamilton Academicals, Queen of the South, and Preston North End, Gillespie signed for Bethlehem Steel in the summer of 1926 and immediately became one of the top forwards in the league. Playing alongside the great Archie Stark in the Steelers attack, they became a two-pronged scoring threat with Gillespie scoring 33 goals in 32 games in his first season, as Bethlehem won the 1926-27 ASL championship. The following year he hit 28 goals in 43 games, then 17 in the Eastern Soccer League before his production fell off sharply. In the fall of 1931 he returned to Preston but only played four games.

GLOVER, Ted

One of the top ASL fullbacks of his time, Ted was born in Bootle on the outskirts of Liverpool and played in the Football League for New Brighton, Southport, and Wigan Borough before coming to the United States to play for the New York Giants in 1928. At first he played for the Giants in the Eastern Soccer League and then in the ASL, helping the club win the championship in 1931. Ted Glover was inducted into the National Soccer Hall of Fame in 1965.

GOLDIE, Malcolm

Goldie arrived in the United States from the Scottish club Clydebank in the summer of 1922 and almost immediately became one of the top wingers in the game. Goldie played six seasons with Bethlehem Steel, often supplying the passes which led to Archie Stark's record goalscoring feats. He helped the Steelers win the ASL championship in 1926-27 and, in addition to supplying the ammunition for Stark, scored ten goals himself. He moved on to Fall River for the 1928-29 season and later played for New Bedford and Pawtucket. Goldie represented the United States against Canada in 1925 and at the conclusion of his playing career coached at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology for ten years.

GONSALVES, Billy

Gonsalves' long and outstanding career began in his hometown of Fall River, Massachusetts, where he played for the Pioneer, Charlton Mill, and Liberal clubs. Then in 1927 he led the semiprofessional Lusitania Recreation club of Cambridge to the Boston and District championship. This resulted in a professional contract with the Boston Wonder Workers and national acclaim as the finest American-born player of his or any other day. Gonsalves was a big man with tremendous shooting power, and he quickly made his presence felt in a Boston team full of experienced Scottish professionals. After two seasons in the Hub, Gonsalves went home to Fall River where he teamed with another local product, Bert Patenaude, in one of the greatest American club teams of all time. Then Gonsalves and Patenaude teamed up in the successful U.S. World Cup team of 1930 and led Fall River to the U.S. Open Cup championships of 1930 and 1931. In 1932 Gonsalves moved on to play for the New Bedford Whalers, then Stix, Baer and Fuller of St. Louis and St. Louis Central Breweries, in each case leading them to the national championship and in the process winning six national championship medals in a row. In 1934 he was back in the national team, playing in the World Cup in Italy. Billy Gonsalves was inducted into the National Soccer Hall of Fame in 1950.

GRAHAM, George

Born in Londonderry, Northern Ireland, Graham spent most of his career in Canada, playing for the great Ulster United team in Toronto. However, he made two notable excursions into the ASL. The first, late in 1926, saw him score eight goals in ten games for Philadelphia, and the second, with Fall River, in 1927-28 when he scored 17 goals in 30 games for the Marksmen. One of the greatest center forwards of his day, Graham was eventually traded by Fall River to the Brooklyn Wanderers for Johnny Nelson.

GREGRETSKY, Joseph

Born in Belfast, Northern Ireland, of Polish parents, Joe played for Dundalk in the League of Ireland before coming to the United States in the summer of 1927 to play for Holley Carburetors in the Detroit Professional League. A center forward or a winger, he didn't stay in Detroit long but was soon playing for the Brooklyn Wanderers in the ASL. Another brief stop and it was on to Newark, where he had a great 1927-28 season, scoring 19 goals in 29 games for a club that was always in the bottom half of the table.

GUTTMANN, Bela

A Hungarian international center half who played in the 1924 Olympics, Guttmann first came to the United States in the spring of 1926 with the famous Hakoah club of Vienna. That fall he was in the New York Giants lineup and remained with the club until moving to Hakoah in 1929, where he won a U.S. Open Cup medal. However, it was as a coach after leaving the United States that Guttmann became really famous, first with the great Hungarian clubs Ujpest Dozsa and Honved, then in Portugal with Porto and Benfica. With Benfica his team won the top club prize in European soccer, the European Cup, two years in a row. Later he coached Penarol in Uruguay, the Austrian club team Wacker, the Austrian national team, and finally Benfica for a second time.

HAEUSLER, Moritz

An Austrian international inside forward, Haeusler played seven times for Austria between 1923 and 1925. He came to the United States in 1926 with the famous Hakoah club of Vienna and stayed on to play for the New York Giants and then Hakoah, leading them to the U.S. Open Cup in 1929.

HAMILL, Mickey

An Irish international wing half, Hamill played for Manchester United from 1911 to 1913, then returned to Belfast to play for Belfast Celtic. But in 1920 he was back in England again, this time with Manchester City, where he played 118 games before crossing the Atlantic in 1924 to play for Fall River. However his stay in the "Spindle City" was very short-lived, lasting just two exhibition games before he signed for Boston. In two full seasons with the Wonder Workers, Hamill played 66 league games and scored one goal. Following a brief stay with New York Giants, Hamill returned home to coach Distillery in the Irish League. He died in mysterious circumstances in July 1943 when his body was fished out of a river. Originally an inside forward, he made his name as one of the finest wing halves of his day, although many felt that he lacked that vital spark that would have made him a really great player.

HARPER, Bill

A former blacksmith and Scots Guards' heavyweight boxing champion, Harper was one of the leading goalkeepers of the 1920s and 1930s. A strong man whose huge clearance kicks delighted the crowds, Harper began his first-class career with Hibernian in 1920, winning the first of his eleven Scottish caps with them in 1923. In November 1925, the famous London club Arsenal paid a record fee to sign him. However, Harper played just 42 games for the Gunners before a dispute led to his signing for Fall River in 1927. Bill played two seasons in the Massachusetts city, appearing in 79 games before moving on to Boston and then New Bedford. After that Harper went back to Arsenal, where he played just 21 games before being transferred to Plymouth Argyle. At Home Park he became something of a legend, both on and off the field, serving the Devon club as player, trainer, groundsman, and laundryman for over 50 years. In 1930 he toured Europe with Fall River.

HENDERSON, George

Henderson scored over 100 goals in the Scottish League for the Glasgow Rangers between 1921 and 1926, when he moved to England to play for Darlington. His stay at the Feethams Ground was short, and soon he was in New York playing for Bob Millar's new Nationals. He played through the 1927-28 season and won a U.S. Open cup winners medal in 1928. When Henderson returned to Britain after just one ASL season, it was to play for Dundee United.

HIBBERT, Billy

A well-traveled soccer player, English international inside forward Hibbert began his career with Bury, then moved on to Newcastle United, Sheffield Wednesday, Leeds United, Bradford City, and Oldham Athletic before arriving in Fall River. Thirty-seven at the time, he only played five games for the Marksmen before moving on to J&P Coats for the first of three seasons. When Billy left Pawtucket to move to Spain to play he was 41 years old.

HIERLANDER, Viktor

Although born in Austria, Hierlander first made his mark with the German club SpVgg Furth before returning to Austria to play for Wiener Amateure, the club that eventually became known as F.K. Austria. Hierlander played five times for Austria between 1925 and 1928 and spent one year with New York Giants, playing in 26 games and scoring 11 goals.

HOWIESON, Jimmy

Scottish international inside forward Howieson spent just one season in the ASL with New Bedford Whalers, playing for a string of British clubs both before and after the 1928-29 season at Battery Park. Howieson played for Airdrieonians, St. Johnstone, Dundee United, and St. Mirren in Scotland, winning a Scottish Cup winners medal and his only Scottish cap while with the St. Mirren. Hull took him from St. Mirren in March 1927 in a bid to boost their promotion chances, but after just over one season he was on his way to the United States. Following the one season in New Bedford, it was back to Hull then on to Shelbourne, Clyde, Alloa, and Glentoran.

HUNTER, Alex

The Tottenham Hotspur goalkeeper in the 1920-21 F.A. Cup Final, Hunter was signed by the Spurs from the Scottish club Queens Park and was mostly a backup to regular goalkeeper Bill Jacques in his two seasons at White Hart Lane. Following his spell with the Spurs, he spent two years with Wigan Borough before joining New Bedford for just two games in the 1925-26 season.

HUNTER, Jimmy

Jimmy joined Newcastle in 1919 but didn't make the first team and went back to Scotland to play for Motherwell and then Falkirk before returning to St. James' Park in January 1924. However, he still couldn't command a regular first-team place and joined New Bedford for the 1925-26 season. It was the beginning of a successful period for club and player, as Jimmy played 170 ASL games at fullback for the Whalers in five seasons.

JAAP, Johnny

Born in Bellshill, Scotland, Jaap was instrumental in the success of the great Bethlehem Steel teams in the ASL. An inside forward who could outjump taller opponents despite his small stature, Johnny was noted for his skillful manipulation of the ball, which led to many of the goals scored by Archie Stark. Jaap grew up in the Pittsburgh area but returned to his native Scotland to play one year for Hearts in the early 1930s. After that it was back to the U.S., where he eventually coached junior teams. Johnny Jaap was inducted into the National Soccer Hall of Fame in 1953.

JACKSON, Alex

One of the great players of the years between the wars, Alex Jackson was a member of the famous "Wembley Wizards," the Scottish national team that humiliated England at Wembley Stadium in 1928. However, early in his career, following two brief spells with Dumbarton and Aberdeen, Jackson played in the American Soccer League for Bethlehem Steel during the 1923-24 season. He then returned to Aberdeen and shortly afterwards moved on to stardom with Huddersfield Town and then Chelsea. But Jackson's career almost came to an early end in Fall River on June 1, 1924, when he misjudged the depth of the water in a swimming pool at the Fall River Boys Club and dived in, striking his head on the bottom of the tank and suffering a badly lacerated scalp.

JACKSON, Walter

Alex Jackson's brother, Walter played in the Scottish League for Kilmarnock, appearing in 74 games and scoring 29 goals before moving to the United States for the 1923-24 season. Teaming up with his brother, Walter, a center forward, scored 13 goals in 21 games during that season. The brothers then returned to Scotland to play for Aberdeen, with Walter moving on to Preston North End in October 1925 before returning for a second spell at Bethlehem in 1927-28

JISZDA, Carl

Carl played 10 times at inside forward for Austria before coming to the United States, where he played one season for Brooklyn.

KEENAN, Arnold

Keenan was one of the Irish players brought to the United States in the summer of 1927 to play for Philadelphia Celtic. After the Philadelphia team folded due to financial problems, Keenan became the property of Fall River, but didn't stay long in the "Spindle City" before moving on for brief spells at Providence and with the New York Nationals. Keenan played for Glentoran in the Irish League and then Crystal Palace in the Football League before his brief career in the U.S.

KENNAWAY, Joe

Born in Montreal, Kennaway played for Canada against the United States in 1926, but it was not until early in 1928 that he appeared in goal for Providence in the ASL. Between then and the end of 1930, Joe played 135 ASL games for Providence, establishing himself as one of the top goalkeepers in the league. When the Providence franchise was sold to Fall River interests in the spring of 1931, he moved with the club and that May turned in an outstanding display of goalkeeping for Fall River against the touring Glasgow Celtic. Tragedy struck Celtic early in the 1931-32 season when their outstanding goalkeeper John Thomson was killed in a game against Rangers. Searching for a top-class goalkeeper, Celtic manager Willie Maley remembered Kennaway, and soon the Canadian was on his way to Scotland. From 1931 to 1939 Kennaway played in 263 Scottish League games for the Celtic, winning two Scottish championship medals and two Scottish Cup Winners' medals. In addition he played once for Scotland against Austria at Hampden Park in 1933 and four times for the Scottish League team. He returned to North America in 1939 and lived for many years in Providence, where he coached Brown University for 15 years. He died suddenly at the Amoriggi Seafood Company in Johnston, Rhode Island, on March 7,1969.

KONRAD, Kalman

A Hungarian international inside forward who played 12 times for his country between 1914 and 1918, Konrad played one season in the ASL. Although well past his peak at that time, his displays for the Brooklyn Wanderers during the 1926-27 season impressed American soccer fans. He played for the famous Hungarian club MTK Budapest from 1910 to 1919 then for the Austrian club Wiener Amateure from 1919 before joining the Brooklyn Wanderers. Returning to Europe he once again played for MTK before coaching Bayern Munich, F.C. Zurich, Slavia Prague, and a number of Swedish clubs. Konrad was born in Backa Palanka, a small village on the Danube in what was then the Hapsberg Empire and today is part of Serbia, and moved to Budapest as a child. He died in Stockholm, Sweden, on May 10, 1980.

KOVACSI, Bela

A halfback, Kovacsi played just one game for Hungary against Austria in Budapest in 1926. He played his club soccer for 33FC and in the ASL played for Hakoah and Brooklyn Wanderers.

LAWSON, Denis

A Scottish international outside right, Lawson began his professional career with St. Mirren around 1920 before moving to Wales to play for Cardiff City in the Football League. He came to the United States in 1926 to play for the new Springfield club and when it folded at the end of the year his registration was picked up by Providence. Then it was back to England to play for Wigan Borough and finally Clyde. A very fast winger, Lawson's one Scottish cap came against England in 1923.

LEONARD, James

Known as "Hooky," Leonard joined Indiana Flooring from the Scottish club Cowdenbeath. An inside forward of considerable talent, he returned to Scotland after just one season then came back to the ASL to play for the New York Nationals. In the 1928-29 season he scored 31 goals in 50 games. Leonard remained with the club through 1929 and 1930 before returning to Britain to play with great success for Sunderland in the Football League. He ended his career with Scottish League club Morton.

LEVIN, Eric

Known by the nickname of "Bagarn," Levin played twice at fullback for Sweden in 1922 while a member of the well-known Swedish club IFK Goteborg. When he came to the U.S. he at first played for New York Viking and then in 1924 for Indiana Flooring for almost two seasons. One game for Bethlehem Steel was followed by another spell with Viking and then back to Scandinavia to coach in Norway. Eventually Levin returned to the U.S. to play for the New York Nationals.

LEWIS, Horace Edgar

Born in Wales, Lewis came to the United States at the age of 14 and rose to become vice president of the Bethlehem Steel Company. Lewis was the driving force behind the great Bethlehem Steel teams from 1915 through to 1930 and instrumental in the formation of the American Soccer League, becoming its first president. He donated the Lewis Cup which at first was awarded to the winners of the special ASL cup competition but became disillusioned with soccer as a result of the war between the ASL and the USFA in 1928. He later became chairman of the Jeffrey Manufacturing Company of Columbus, Ohio, and then president of Jones and Laughlin. H. Edgar Lewis was inducted into the National Soccer Hall of Fame in 1950.

LORIMER, Alec

One of the premier wing halves in the history of the ASL, Lorimer played only briefly in his native Scotland for Kilmarnock before joining Philadelphia for the 1921-22 season. From then on Lorimer played for Fall River, Shawsheen Indians, New Bedford, J&P Coats and Pawtucket. In all he played in 306 league games from 1921 to 1931. He helped Fall River win the championship in 1923-24 and 1924-25.

MAHRER, Pavel

Born in Teplice in northern Czechoslovakia in 1900, Mahrer played six times for Czechoslovakia between 1923 and 1925, including the 1924 Olympic Games in Paris. He was a member of his hometown Teplitzer FK when they toured South America in the early 1920s before playing for DFC Prague in the Czech First Division. Paul, as he was known in the U.S., played for the Brooklyn Wanderers in the 1926-27 season, then returned to Czechoslovakia. In 1928 he returned to the U.S. to play for New York Hakoah in the Eastern Soccer League, and won a U.S. Open Cup medal with the club in 1929. An outstanding wing half, Mahrer stayed with Hakoah until 1932 when once again he returned to Czechoslovakia, returning to the U.S. in 1945. Later his son Jerry played in the ASL.

MARK, Samuel

The man behind the most successful American soccer team of the 1920s and early 1930s, Mark was born in Fall River and became interested in sports as a boy. He played football, basketball, and baseball at Durfee High School in Fall River and later at Lehigh University in Bethlehem, Pennsylvania. A talented basketball player, he first became involved in sports promotion when he brought the original New York Celtics to Fall River for games against local opposition. He became involved in soccer, a sport he never played, in the early 1920s, when he took over the Fall River franchise in the ASL toward the end of the team's first season and quickly turned it into a winner both on and off the field. Mark shrewdly built a stadium in North Tiverton, just over the state line in Rhode Island, where his team could play on Saturday or Sunday, thus avoiding the Massachusetts "blue" laws, and signed a number of key players. The team went from success to success, winning the ASL championship six times, the ASL cup once, and the U.S. Open Cup, the national championship, four times between 1923 and 1931. Later he owned the New Bedford Whalers when they won the national championship in 1932. Mark was also a major player in helping to settle the soccer war in 1929 and one of the most prominent men in U.S. soccer in his time. From soccer he went into the entertainment field, owning the Highway Casino in Westport, Massachusetts.

MARSHALL, Jack

Considered by many the finest fullback in the world in his day, Marshall came to the United States in 1924 to play for Brooklyn Wanderers. A Scottish international, Marshall was capped seven times between 1921 and 1924. He began his career with St. Mirren during World War I, but was transferred to Football League club Middlesbrough in November 1919 for 2,000 pounds. A big man who was a quick mover, Jock surprised everyone by moving to Welsh League club Llanelly in August 1923. From Llanelly he came to the U.S. and played for the United States against Canada in 1926. His ASL career saw him move from Brooklyn to Newark and back again.

MARTIN, Tommy

One of four players that Fall River owner Sam Mark brought from Scotland in 1925, Martin played a season and a half for the Marksmen before moving on to play for J&P Coats and the Pawtucket Rangers. He came to the U.S. from Motherwell and in his day was one of the finest fullbacks in the league. In 1931 he was player-manager of Pawtucket.

MASSIE, Alex

Massie made his name in British soccer after his spell in the United States with Bethlehem Steel. One of the greatest wing halves in the game in the 1930s, Massie had played for Partick Thistle, Ayr United, and Bury before moving to the famous Pennsylvania club. Once across the Atlantic, he quickly found himself in the middle of the dispute between the ASL and the United States Football Association at the beginning of the 1928-29 season. His appearances in the ASL before Bethlehem Steel was suspended and formed the Eastern Soccer League totalled just seven. He completed that season with the Steelers and then played the 1929-30 season in the short-lived Atlantic Coast League. On his return to Britain, Massie, who could play equally well at inside forward, first made his name with Hearts of the Scottish League and then with the famous Aston Villa club of the Football League. He played 18 times for Scotland between 1932 and 1938.

McATEE, Andrew

McAtee came to the United States late in his career at the age of 37 and played only briefly for New Bedford and Newark. Prior to that he had played 486 Scottish League games for Glasgow Celtic and scored 72 goals as one of the outstanding wingers in Scottish soccer. He made one appearance for Scotland against Wales in 1913.

McAULEY, Bob

Like many of the outstanding players of the time, McAuley came to North America as a teenager. In McAuley's case it was to Canada, where he played for two Montreal clubs and turned down an offer from Everton before joining Providence for the 1925-26 season. After three seasons with the Clamdiggers he was transferred to Fall River, where he spent another three seasons. Considered a little slow but excellent in the tackle and a superb distributor of the ball, McAuley came to the attention of the Glasgow Rangers when they played Fall River in 1930. At the start of the next Scottish season, McAuley was at Ibrox Park and played for the Rangers until his transfer to the London club Chelsea in May 1932. McAuley won two Scottish caps, and when his playing days were over became Rangers scout in the east of Scotland with great success.

McAULEY, Jimmy

One of the Irishman who came to the U.S. in 1927 to play for the ill-fated Philadelphia Celtic franchise, McAuley stayed on to make a name for himself with Fall River, J&P Coats, and the Pawtucket Rangers. An inside forward, McAuley continued his career after the first ASL folded, playing in two U.S. Open Cup finals with Pawtucket in 1934 and 1935.

McCONNELL, James

McConnell had a wandering career which took him to a number of Scottish clubs before he came to the United States in 1926 to play for Springfield. When that club folded at the end of the year, he joined Providence, scoring 17 goals in 21 games from center forward. The following year he had 7 goals in 10 games for Bethlehem Steel, but in August of 1928 was back in Britain playing for Carlisle United of the Football League, where he still holds the club scoring record with 42 goals in the 1928-29 season.

McDONALD, Robert

Known to everyone as “Whitey,” McDonald was born in Omagh but came to Canada as a boy and grew up in Hamilton, Ontario. There he made his name with the local Thistle club before moving down the road to Toronto Ulster. In 1924 “Whitey” joined Bethlehem Steel, where he made his name at right half in the famous halfback line of McDonald, Carnihan, and McGregor. With McDonald in the lineup, Bethlehem won the ASL championship in 1926-27 and the U.S. Open Cup in 1926. Glasgow Rangers, on tour here in 1928, could see the potential and signed him, and from 1928 to 1938 he played for the famous Scottish club, winning numerous league and cup medals. He also played twice for his native Northern Ireland.

McGHEE, Bart

Bart was born in Edinburgh, Scotland, and came to the United States as a young teenager. He played for the team of the New York Shipbuilding Company in the 1917-18 season and then in Philadelphia for Wolfenden Shore and Hibernians before being signed by the New York Football Club of the ASL in the early 1920s. Then it was on to Indiana Flooring, New York Nationals, and New York Giants. He was selected to the United States World Cup team in 1930 and scored the first U.S. goal in World Cup history. His father, Jim, was also a famous soccer player and captained the Scottish club Hibernian in the Scottish Cup Final of 1887, played for Scotland against Wales in 1886, and later was manager of Scottish First Division club Hearts. Bart McGhee was inducted into the National Soccer Hall of Fame in 1986.

McGILL, Charlie

One of the four players Fall River owner Sam Mark brought from Scotland at the start of the 1925 season, McGill had an outstanding career with the Marksmen. Known universally as "Our ba' Charlie" as he claimed possession of every throw-in, McGill won U.S. Open Cup winners' medals in 1927, 1930, and 1931. With the ASL running into troubled times, McGill returned to Scotland where between 1931 and 1938 he formed a famous fullback partnership with Willie Cooper and played in 218 Scottish League games for Aberdeen. McGill also played once for the Scottish League. In the 1950s McGill returned to Fall River to coach.

McGREGOR, Bob

The left half in the great Bethlehem Steel halfback line of McDonald, Carnihan, and McGregor, Bob came to the United States from Scotland one year after leading Morton to a 1-0 triumph over Rangers in the Scottish Cup Final. He remained with the Pennsylvania club until the summer of 1930 when the team folded and moved with most of the former Bethlehem players to Newark. McGregor was one of the finest wing halves in the history of the ASL.

McGUIRE, Jimmy

Born in Edinburgh, Scotland, McGuire came to the United States in the mid-1920s after winning two Scottish schoolboy international caps. His first major club was the Brooklyn Wanderers, a team he joined in 1929, and he quickly established himself in a lineup of experienced players. When Glasgow Celtic toured North America in the summer of 1931 they spotted McGuire, and he returned to Scotland with them. However, Jimmy failed to crack the first team lineup of the famous club and was soon on his way to England, where he played 70 games for Northampton Town between 1932 and 1936. In the summers he returned to the United States to play. He finally left Northampton and led St. Mary's Celtic of Brooklyn to the U.S. Open Cup final in 1938, but the team lost to Chicago Sparta. One year later the team was back in the final, this time winning the coveted trophy by defeating Chicago Manhattan Beer. Upon retireing as a player, he turned to administration and served two separate terms as president of the United States Soccer Football Association. At the time of his death, he was senior vice president of the real estate management concern of Cushman and Wakefield.

McKENNA, Frank

A goalscoring winger, McKenna played for numerous clubs in the ASL with great success. He came to the United States from the Scottish club Vale of Leven, and played for Todd Shipyards and then Paterson Silk Sox in the U.S. Open Cup Finals of 1922 and 1923. But he achieved his greatest success with Fall River, where he was a member of the ASL championship winning teams of 1923-24, 1924-25, and 1925-26. He also played in his third Open Cup final in 1924 with the Marksmen and toured Europe with Fall River in 1930.

McKINNEY, Pete

A wing half who had played three games for Liverpool during the 1920-21 Football League season, McKinney was a regular with the New York Giants from 1923 to 1930.

McLEAVY, Mike

Mike made just two Scottish League appearances for Kilmarnock before coming to the United States in 1923 to play for J&P Coats. He subsequently became one of the best inside forwards in the game, at first with J&P Coats and then Providence but particularly with New Bedford, where he teamed very effectively on the left wing with Jerry Best.

McMILLAN, Tommy

Tommy joined Boston in 1924 along with Alex McNab and Willie Paterson and after three very successful seasons in the Hub, moved on to play for five years with New Bedford. One of the finest fullbacks in the league, McMillan played for Dunfermline in the Scottish League before coming to the ASL.

McNAB, Alex

A key figure in American soccer from 1924 until 1937, Scottish international outside right McNab starred for Boston from 1924 to 1928, for Fall River from 1928 to 1932, for three St. Louis clubs from 1932 to 1937, and also for New Bedford briefly but successfully in 1932. McNab came to the United States from Scottish League club Morton in 1924, having played twice for Scotland in 1921. When he left Scottish football he caused a sensation and was an instant success with Boston, leading the Wonder Workers to the one-time American Professional Championship in the spring of 1925 over St. Louis Ben Millers. He was a member of Boston's ASL championship winning team in 1927-28 and the ASL Cup winning teams of 1925 and 1927. A switch to Fall River in the summer of 1928 brought more success including championship winning medals in the 1928-29 season and the 1930 season. McNab was also responsible in part for the development of Billy Gonsalves, who was his right-wing partner, in Gonsalves' early days at Boston and the two played together for a large part of their careers. McNab won U.S. Open Cup winning medals with Fall River in 1930 and 1931, New Bedford in 1932, St. Louis Stix, Baer and Fuller in 1933 and 1934, and Central Breweries in 1935. Six straight championships. He was also on the losing side in the finals of 1936 and 1937. McNab was player-coach of the Stix, Baer and Fuller team, a team owned and operated by a department store.

McPHERSON, Bill

A fixture at right half with the Fall River Marksmen from the day he joined the club at the end of the 1922-23 season until the team was moved to New York early in 1931 to become the Yankees, McPherson made 366 appearances in the ASL between 1923 and 1931. He was a member of the Marksmen's ASL championship winning teams in 1923-24, 1924-25, 1925-26, 1928-29, 1929 Fall, and 1930 seasons. He also won U.S. Open Cup winning medals in 1924,1927,1930, and 1931 with Fall River and later with New Bedford 1932, St. Louis Stix, Baer and Fuller 1933 and 1934, for a total of seven. McPherson was part of a famous right-wing triangle of McPherson, McNab, and Gonsalves. He was born in Greenock, Scotland and played for Morton in the Scottish League before coming to the United States.

MILLAR, Bob

Coach of the highly successful United States World Cup team in 1930, Millar came to the U.S. in the early years of this century after playing in the Scottish League with St. Mirren. He won U.S. Open Cup medals in 1914 with Brooklyn Field Club, and in 1915 and 1919 with Bethlehem Steel. When the ASL was formed he played at first with J&P Coats and then with Fall River, New York

Football Club, New York Giants, Indiana Flooring, and New York Nationals. He was player-coach with Indiana Flooring and with the Nationals, taking the Nationals to the U.S. Open Cup title in 1928. Millar also played twice for the United States against Canada in 1925. Bob Millar was inducted into the National Soccer Hall of Fame in 1950.

MOLNAR, Gyorgy

A Hungarian international inside forward, Molnar played 26 times for his country between 1920 and 1927. Before joining the New York Giants for the 1927-28 season he played for MTK Budapest and Hungaria FC in his homeland. In addition to playing for the Giants in the ASL, he also played for Brooklyn Hakoah and Brooklyn Wanderers.

MONTGOMERIE, Jimmy

One of the finest center halves to play in the ASL, Montgomerie joined the New Bedford Whalers from the Grenadier Guards team of Montreal early in 1925. From then until the end of the 1931 season he played in 303 ASL games, all but six with the Whalers and most of them as captain. He was also the club's assistant coach for awhile. Born in Darvel, Ayrshire, Scotland, Jimmy came to Canada before the start of WWI and in March 1915 enlisted in the Canadian army. Soon he was on his way back to Europe to fight with great distinction, winning the Military Cross and Military Medal. On returning to Canada he played for a number of teams in Montreal before moving to New Bedford. In the 1930s he returned to Britain to play and was back in action again in WWII, fighting in North Africa and the Middle East. Following the war he returned to Canada to live, and in July 1963 a testimonial dinner was held in his honor in New Bedford.

MOORHOUSE, George

Moorhouse could play equally effectively at left back or outside left, and his best position was always a matter of some debate. More often than not during his long career with the New York Giants he played at left back, but when asked to play on the wing often responded with a goal. He played for the United States in the World Cups of 1930 and 1934 at left back and against Canada in 1926 at left half. He captained the United States against Mexico in the World Cup of 1934 in Italy. Born in Liverpool, England, on April 4,1901, he played two games for Tranmere Rovers in the Third Division of the Football League in December 1921 and January 1922 before moving first to Canada, where he played for Montreal CPR, and then to the United States, where he played briefly for the Brooklyn Wanderers and then for the Giants from 1923 to 1930. Brief spells with New York Soccer Club and New York Yankees followed before he became a fixture with the New York Americans, appearing in the U.S. Open Cup Finals of 1933 and 1937. He died in Long Beach, Long Island, on October 12,1943. George Moorhouse was inducted into the National Soccer Hall of Fame in 1986.

MORLEY, Fred

Born in Burslem in the English Potteries, Morley played for Blackpool and then Brentford in the Football League. In March 1921, while a Brentford player, he was advised to retire due to a serious knee injury and to emigrate to a warmer climate to help heal his knee. Morley promptly left England and moved to the United States where, as an inside forward, he played on five successive ASL championship winning teams. He began with Philadelphia in 1921-22 and followed by winning the title with J&P Coats in 1922-23 and then with Fall River in 1923-24, 1924-25, and 1925-26. During that time he helped Fall River win the U.S. Open Cup in 1924, scoring twice in the final against the St. Louis Vesper Buicks. He was manager of the Marksmen for awhile after his retirement from playing and also operated a service station in Fall River.

MORRIS, Billy

A wing half who came to the United States following a very brief career in the Scottish League with Kilmarnock, Morris became a regular with the Brooklyn Wanderers and also played for the United States against Canada in 1926. Morris played 181 games for Brooklyn between 1924 and 1929.

MUIRHEAD, Tommy

Muirhead played 352 games and scored 49 goals for Glasgow Rangers during a lengthy Scottish League career that was broken by a short spell as player-manager of the newly formed Boston Wonder Workers. In 1924, Muirhead left Ibrox as a result of a dispute with Rangers over his desire to become a traveling salesman in his spare time, but after playing just 15 games for Boston he returned to Glasgow. He was responsible for bringing a number of top soccer players to the Hub and even when he returned to Scotland was looked on suspiciously as an agent for American soccer. Muirhead played eight times for Scotland and, on retiring, became manager of Scottish League club St. Johnstone and then secretary-manager of Preston North End in the Football League.

NEHADOMA, Janos

A prolific goalscorer, Nehadoma was born in Budapest but played a large part of his career in Italy, even though he was sometimes restricted by the rules in the Italian League regarding non-Italian players. These rules prompted him to leave Pistoiese of the Italian Second Division in 1928 and come to the U.S. In his first seven games for Brooklyn he scored seven goals and in the following year was the league's joint top scorer, with 43 goals in 48 games. In his short ASL career from 1927 to 1930, he played in 105 games and scored 80 goals. Then it was back to Italy to play for Livorno, Fiorentina, and Modena, and later to coach Atalanta.

NELSON, Johnny

The number two all-time goalscorer in the ASL behind Archie Stark, Nelson joined the Brooklyn Wanderers toward the end of the 1923-24 season from Yonkers Thistle of the New York State League. He played for Brooklyn from then until March 1928 when he was traded to Fall River for George Graham. Nelson's stay at Fall River was short, and early in the 1928-29 season he moved on to J&P Coats. But once again he failed to settle and soon found himself back in New York playing for the Nationals. But wherever he went he scored goals, 10 in 14 games for Fall River and 7 in 12 games for J&P Coats. Altogether, Nelson scored 223 goals in his ASL career, plus 11 in the U.S. Open Cup and 16 in the ASL Cup competition. In the 1929-30 Atlantic Coast League season he was the league's leading goalscorer with 39 goals.

NIKOLSBURGER, Reszo

Also known as Rudolph, Nikolsburger could play at halfback or inside or center forward. He played once for Hungary against Austria in 1920 and played his club soccer with the famous Ferencvaros club of Budapest and then with Vienna Hakoah. His entire ASL career was spent with Hakoah.

NILSEN, Werner

A member of the United States World Cup team in Italy in 1934, Nilsen was born in Norway and played for the Norwegian-Americans of Boston before joining the Wonder Workers in 1926. He quickly established himself in the team, first at right half and later at inside or center forward. Known as "Scotty," he played for Boston from 1926 until 1929 then joined Fall River before moving on to New Bedford and St. Louis Stix, Baer and Fuller. He was joint leading goalscorer in the league in 1928-29, scoring 43 goals in 53 games, and won U.S. Open Cup winners' medals with Fall River in 1930 and 1931, New Bedford in 1932, and St. Louis in 1933 and 1934. He was on the losing side in the finals of 1936 and 1937 with the St. Louis Shamrocks.

O'BRIEN, Michael Terrance

O'Brien played just seven games in the ASL before returning to Britain and writing an article highly critical of the league and its facilities in the Topical Times. O'Brien was a wanderer who played for numerous clubs in both the Football League and the Irish League but never seemed to settle anywhere for long. He also played for both the Republic of Ireland and Northern Ireland in international competition.

O'BRIEN, William "Shamus"

Born in Scotland, O'Brien came to the United States at the age of 11 and played his early soccer for a number of teams in New Jersey. He played his first game in the ASL for the New York Giants in 1926 and from that time on became a fixture at inside forward. He remained with the Giants until 1931 and played in the memorable final in 1931, scoring twice when the Giants won the ASL championship. Shamus was selected to represent the United States in the World Cup of 1930 but had to withdraw when it was discovered that he was not an American citizen. Shamus O'Brien was inducted into the National Soccer Hall of Fame in 1990.

OLIVER, Arnold

Arnie was a member of the United States World Cup team in 1930, but didn't play in any of the four internationals the U.S. participated in in South America. He did, however, see action in a number of the exhibition games against club teams. He first came to attention as a member of the New Bedford Defenders team that won the U.S. Amateur Cup in 1926, and then went on to play in the ASL for Shawsheen, New Bedford, Hartford, J&P Coats, Pawtucket, Fall River, and Providence. An inside forward, Arnie had his best ASL season in 1927-28 when his combined goal total with Hartford and J&P Coats totalled 27 in 44 games. Arnie Oliver was inducted into the National Soccer Hall of Fame in 1968.

PATENAUDE, Bert

One of the greatest goalscorers in U.S. soccer history, Patenaude was born in Fall River of French-Canadian parents. He grew up in the "Spindle City" but made his debut in the ASL for Philadelphia in 1928. However, before the 1928-29 season was over he was playing for Fall River and remained with the Marksmen until early in 1931 when the franchise was moved to New York. He won U.S. Open Cup medals for Fall River in 1930 and 1931, then moved on to lead the New York Giants to the ASL title for the 1931 season. During his short ASL career he scored 119 goals in 125 games.

Later he won another Open Cup medal with St. Louis Central Breweries in 1935 and was a losing finalist with St. Louis Shamrocks in 1936. Patenaude was a member of the U.S. World Cup team in 1930 and in the game against Paraguay scored three goals to become the first player to score a hat trick in a World Cup game. Bert Patenaude was inducted into the National Soccer Hall of Fame in 1971.

PATERSON, Bill

Paterson played for Scottish League clubs Cowdenbeath and Armadale and for Football League clubs Derby County and Coventry City before coming to the United States to play for the new Springfield club in 1926. When that team folded at the end of the year he moved on to Fall River. A center forward, Paterson was always among the goals, totaling 151 in his ASL career. While moving around a lot, Paterson made his biggest impact in his years with Providence, where he scored 78 goals in 75 games.

PATERSON, Willie

The Wonder Workers goalkeeper in their first season, Paterson joined Boston from Dunfermline Athletic but only played the one season before returning to Scotland. Another spell at East End Park followed by some outstanding games for Dundee United saw him transferred to Arsenal in January 1928. But he only played 15 games for the famous London club before returning to Scotland to play for Airdrieonians.

PERRY, Bob

A center half who spent the biggest part of his ASL career with J&P Coats and Pawtucket, Perry played for the Scottish League clubs Kings Park and Stirling Albion before joining Football League club Bury in May 1912. Between then and 1923, Bob played 138 games and scored 17 goals for Bury, however, he was suspended for life by the English Football Association on May 29,1923, for "fixing" two games against Coventry City in 1920. It was alleged that Perry, along with three other players, was paid to make sure that the games with Coventry ended in ties. Perry first played for Coats in September 1924, over a year after the suspension was handed down.

PIPA, Istvan

Known as Steve in the United States, Pipa was an Hungarian international inside forward who played just once for his country against Belgium in 1926. He didn't play a lot of games in the ASL during his career with Bridgeport Hungarians late in 1929 and continuing with Brooklyn Wanderers and Newark Americans in 1930.

REDER, Johnny

Reder was not only a top-class goalkeeper, but also a major-league baseball player. Reder played 17 games at first base for the Boston Red Sox in 1932, getting 37 at bats and 5 hits before ending up in the minors. Six feet tall and weighing 184 pounds, he began his soccer career with Walsh Chevrolet in Fall River. It wasn't long before he joined the Marksmen, where he was the first choice goalkeeper from 1929 until the franchise was moved to New York City in the spring of 1931. Later that year he played for New Bedford. Reder won U.S. Open Cup medals with Fall River in 1930 and 1931.

RENZULLI, Pete

Born in New York City in 1895, Renzulli found himself playing soccer by accident when, strolling through a park, he was asked to make up the numbers in a game. From then on he never looked back and won U.S. Open Cup winners' medals with Robins Dry Dock in 1921 and Paterson Silk Sox in 1923 as well as being on the losing side with Todd Shipyards in the 1922 final. Later in his career he won a third medal when New York Nationals won the title in 1928. Renzulli played for Todd Shipyards in 1921-22 the first year of the ASL and continued to play in the league until 1930. In addition to Todd, his teams included Paterson Silk Sox, Indiana Flooring, New York Nationals, and New York Giants. A goalkeeper who was asked to play on the wing in an emergency in a game against Philadelphia in 1928, he scored the only goal for the Nationals in a 3-1 defeat. Pete Renzulli was inducted into the National Soccer Hall of Fame in 1951.

ROBERTSON, David

An outstanding fullback with the Brooklyn Wanderers from 1922 to 1930, Robertson played in 218 ASL games, and in 1925 was selected to play for the United States against Canada. He began his professional career with Kilmarnock in the Scottish League and then moved to Dumfries to join Queen of the South before crossing the Atlantic.

ROCK, Robert

A strong robust center forward, Rock played but one season in the ASL despite the fact that he was able to score 21 goals in just 30 games for three different clubs. Rock was signed by Fall River from Airdrieonians of the Scottish League in July 1926, but he couldn't find a regular place in the lineup, despite scoring eight goals in nine games. Fall River loaned him first to J&P Coats and then to Philadelphia. He had begun his Scottish League career with Kilmarnock and had demonstrated his scoring ability by netting 9 goals in 22 games. The transfer fee Kilmarnock received from Airdrie for his services is said to have built a wall at the entrance to the Kilmarnock ground, known even today as the Bobby Rock wall. After his brief stay in the U.S. he returned to Scotland to play for Airdrie before moving on to Barrow of the Football League and another Scottish League club Stenhousemuir.

SCHILLINGER, Samuel

Schillinger, a fullback, played for DFC Prague and four times for Czechoslovakia between 1926 and 1929. A dentist, he came to the United States in 1927 and played one full season for the New York Giants.

SCHWARZ, Erno

A Hungarian international winger, Schwarz came to the United States in the spring of 1926 with the famous Vienna Hakoah team, and that fall was back in New York playing for the New York Giants. After two full seasons with the Giants, he was instrumental in forming the New York Hakoah club which won the U.S. Open Cup in 1929. Starting in 1931 he became coach of the New York Americans and in later years was involved in the administration of the second American Soccer League. Schwarz was inducted into the National Soccer Hall of Fame in 1951.

SCHYLANDER, Kaleb

Known in Sweden by the nickname of "Kairo," Schylander, a Swedish international inside forward, played for IFK Goteborg before coming to the United States. Capped seven times for Sweden, he came to the U.S. and played for New York Viking before joining Indiana Flooring. After three seasons in the ASL with the Floor Layers, he returned to Viking and in later years lived in Florida.

SEDLACEK, Franz

A Czechoslovakian international center forward from DFC Prague, Sedlacek played just five league games for Brooklyn Wanderers at the end of the 1926-27 season, scoring three goals. He also played in five league cup games and was on the losing side in that year's final against Boston.

SHAW, Charlie

Although born in Scotland, Shaw began his professional career in London with Queens Park Rangers, where he played for six seasons. Returning to Scotland he signed for Glasgow Celtic, appearing in the 1914 Scottish Cup Final and playing in 421 Scottish League games. At the end of his career following a brief spell with Clyde, he crossed the Atlantic and played one season for New Bedford Whalers.

SLONE, Phil

A member of the United States World Cup team in 1930, Slone was a wing half, and although he didn't play in any of the three World Cup games, he did play in the international against Brazil in Rio de Janiero. Slone began his career at St. John's University in New York and was playing for the New York Giants when he was selected to represent the United States. On returning from Uruguay he played with distinction for Hakoah. Phil Slone was inducted into the National Soccer Hall of Fame in 1986.

SMITH, Edmund

Edmund Smith joined the Shawsheen Indians from Arbroath in Scotland and played at inside left on the team that won the U.S. Open Cup in 1925. During the 1925-26 season he was an important member of the team that played so well in the ASL, before it folded, being joint top goalscorer. The following season with Bethlehem Steel, he scored three goals in four games and was selected to represent the United States against Canada at inside right. However, his stay with Bethlehem was short and he moved on to Detroit to work for the Ford Motor Company and play in the Michigan industrial league. In the late 1920s he returned to Andover and became a caretaker for Andover's Spring Garden Cemetery, a job he held for 30 years.

SMITH, Steve

Steve left his native Aberdeen as a young man and played for a number of teams in the United States and Canada before joining the Brooklyn Wanderers in February 1924. He quickly developed into one of the best goalkeepers in the ASL and played in 246 league games for the club. With the ASL in trouble, Smith went home to Aberdeen and between 1930 and 1937 made 233 Scottish league appearances. On retiring from the game, Smith returned to the United States, worked for the New York Telephone Company, and lived in the Bronx.

STARK, Archie

The most prolific goalscorer in American soccer history, Stark was born in Glasgow but came to the United States as a young man. His career in the ASL began with New York Football Club, where he was used mainly at inside right, but really hit full stride with Bethlehem Steel as a center forward. In his first season with the famous Steel club, he scored 67 goals in 44 league games and added three more in ASL cup competition. Between 1921 and 1932 he had scored 248 goals in ASL league games, 15 in ASL cup games, and 29 in U.S. Open Cup games. He played for the United States against Canada twice in 1925, scoring four times in the 6-1 American win at Ebbets Field in Brooklyn. Selected to the U.S. World Cup team in 1930, he turned down the offer, citing business reasons, but later went on tour to Europe as a guest player with Fall River. Archie Stark was inducted into the National Soccer Hall of Fame in 1950.

STERNBERG, Laszlo

A Hungarian international fullback who played 19 times for his country, Sternberg played for the New York Giants in 1928-29 before switching to Hakoah. In Hungary he played his club soccer for Ujpest Dosza.

STEVENS, Andy

The leading goalscorer in the league in 1925-26 with 44 goals and in 1927-28 with 30 goals, Stevens came to the ASL from Canada. He began with Boston in the 1924-25 season but near the end of the season was transferred to New Bedford. A very powerful header of a ball, Stevens scored 154 goals in his ASL career, before returning to Canada to play for Toronto Scottish. In 1932 he led Toronto Scottish to the Canadian championship and in 1933 to the North American club championship, defeating St. Louis Stix, Baer and Fuller in the final at Soldier Field in Chicago.

STONEHAM, Charles A.

Born in Jersey City on July 5,1876, Charles Stoneham rose from the job of board boy in a brokerage office to a position of prominence in the financial and sports world. He acquired control of the New York Giants National League baseball team in 1919 and saw his players win the World Series in 1921, 1922, and 1933. During the summer of 1926 he bought the Indiana Flooring franchise in the American Soccer League. With a team named the New York Giants already operating in the league, he named his team the New York Nationals. The team won the U.S. Open Cup at the end of its first season, having struggled in the league. In 1930 the Nationals became the Giants when the Giants came under new ownership and changed their name to the New York Soccer Club. Stoneham became a vice-president of the league and in April 1928 made a number of controversial proposals. Among his proposals were that teams in the ASL be strengthened by having the baseball club owners acquire some of the franchises, and that a league similar to the ASL be established in the west, with the winners of the eastern and western leagues playing off for the U.S. Open Cup. Stoneham also wanted the outdoor season suspended in December and January with an indoor league taking is place. He also announced that the New York Nationals, holders of the Open Cup at that time, would not play another Open Cup game, saying that he objected to the system in place because playing Open Cup games in the middle of the season broke up the ASL schedule. The controversy over the Open Cup games eventually led to the soccer war of 1928-29. Mr. Stoneham died in Hot Springs, Arkansas, on January 6,1936.

SUNDBERG, Thore

Sundberg played twice for Sweden in 1919 before coming to the United States where he played for Bethlehem Steel, New York Viking, and Robins Dry Dock as well as ASL clubs Fall River United, Indiana Flooring, and Newark Skeeters.

SZENTMIKLOSSY, Bela

A Hungarian international winger who played once for his country against Germany in 1924, Bela played for the Bridgeport Hungarians and Newark Americans in the ASL.

TANDLER, Hans

An Austrian international fullback who played 18 times for his country between 1924 and 1930, Tandler played two full seasons for the New York Giants after joining them from Wiener AC of Vienna.

TATE, Ned

As befitted a blacksmith, Tate was one of the ironmen of the ASL, a fullback who had a lot to do with the success of Fall River in the early years. Altogether Ned played in 274 league games between 1922 and 1931. He was a member of the Fall River championship winning teams of 1923-24, 1924-25, and 1925-26, before being transferred to J&P Coats for the 1926-27 season. He returned to Fall River the following season as part of a deal that sent Findlay Kerr and Tommy Martin to Coats. There followed spells with New Bedford, J&P Coats again, Philadelphia, Fall River for the third time, and finally a very successful three years with the Pawtucket Rangers. Tate was born in England and crossed the Atlantic to Canada with the idea of making enough money to continue on to Australia or South Africa. However, he was very seasick on the voyage and decided to stay in North America. He worked and played for awhile in Beloeil just outside Montreal before a scout for the Marksmen brought him to Fall River. In addition to his ASL championship medals, Tate played on the winning Fall River team in the U.S. Open Cup Final of 1924 against the St. Louis Vesper Buicks and was coach of the Pawtucket Rangers teams in the U.S. Open Cup finals of 1934 and 1935.

TODD, William

Born in Wilmington, Delaware, in 1864, Todd owned the Todd Shipyards team in the American Soccer League in 1921. He was involved with shipyards throughout his life and was in charge of the construction work on the yacht Volunteer, which won the America’s Cup in 1887. Later, as president of the Robins Dry Dock and Repair Company in South Brooklyn, his team won the U.S. Open Cup in the spring of 1921.

VISSER, Gerrit

A Dutch international who played seven times for his country in 1924 and 1925, Visser played three games for Bethlehem Steel late in the 1925-26 season, scoring four goals in three games. He then moved on to play in the Detroit Professional League for Holley Carburetors and appeared in the 1927 U.S. Open Cup Final against Fall River.

WALKER, Bobby

A very effective outside right, Walker came to the United States after playing for Kilmarnock and East Stirlingshire in the Scottish League. He played for the New York Nationals in their first year but partway through the second year was transferred to J&P Coats. He played in the U.S. Open Cup Final of 1928, winning a medal when the Nationals defeated the Chicago Bricklayers.

WHITE, James

Known to everyone as "Tec," White was one of four players owner Sam Mark brought to Fall River before the start of the 1925-26 season. An outside or inside left, White began his senior career with Albion Rovers of the Scottish League and played in the 1920 Scottish Cup Final against Kilmarnock. Following one season with Maidstone United in England's Southern League, Tec returned to Scotland to play for Motherwell before joining Fall River. One of a family of soccer-playing brothers, he quickly became a key figure in the Marksmen lineup and eventually appeared in 282 games and scored 114 goals between 1925 and 1931. In addition to Fall River, White also played for the New York Yankees and the New Bedford Whalers. With Fall River he won U.S. Open Cup winners' medals in 1930 and 1931 and a third medal with New Bedford in 1932.

WOOD, James W.

Wood played in the 1920 and 1922 Football Association Cup Finals for Huddersfield Town and came to the United States at the end of his career, playing briefly for Fall River in 1925-26 and then for Springfield and Providence in 1926-27.

WORTMANN, Siegfried

An Austrian international inside forward who played once for his country against Czechoslovakia in 1926, Wortmann was the subject of some controversy during the "soccer war" in 1928. He played for Vienna Hakoah before coming to the United States in 1927, where he had a very successful ASL career first with the New York Nationals and then with Hakoah.

YULE, Bobby

Yule's lengthy ASL career began when he arrived from Aberdeen in 1923. Almost his entire career in the league was spent with the Brooklyn Wanderers, for whom he played outside left with great success. In 1930 he moved to the New York Giants and in 1931 to Fall River and then the New York Yankees. From 1923 to 1931, Bobby Yule played in 227 league games. In Scotland he had played for Aberdeen in 27 Scottish League games from 1919 to 1922.

INTERNATIONAL LEAGUE - 1926

The International League was formed at a meeting held on January 10, 1926, in Providence, Rhode Island, between teams in the American Soccer League and teams in the National Soccer League in Ontario and Quebec. At that time it was decided that the league should include Montreal Carsteel, Montreal Canadiens, Toronto Ulster United, and Toronto Scottish from Canada and the Boston Wonder Workers, New Bedford Whalers, and Brooklyn Wanderers from the United States. One more American team was to be named later. When the league began play on May 15 the make up had changed considerably.

However, while it was known as the International League, and while the exact details are sketchy, this was anything but a league. During the summer of 1926 each American team played each Canadian team once in Canada, but the Canadian teams did not play each other, and neither did the American teams. In the fall the Canadian teams visited the United States but only played the Brooklyn Wanderers.

Eventually the final for the Nathan Straus Cup was played between Brooklyn Wanderers and Toronto Ulster United in Brooklyn and was won by Toronto Ulster. The competition lasted for just that one year.

INTERNATIONALS

During the years in which the original American Soccer League operated, many of its players were chosen to represent the United States and Canada in international competition. The first occasion in which this happened was in 1925, when the United States played two internationals against Canada with another game being played in 1926.

Following that, players from the American Soccer League formed the nucleus of the United States team that competed in the World Cup of 1930. Listed here are the players who represented the United States in 1925 and 1926, plus the results and lineups of the games against Canada. Also listed is the United States World Cup team of 1930 and the results and lineups of the games played in South America.

1925 and 1926

The following players represented the United States in the three games against Canada. Goalkeepers: James Douglas (New York Giants), Tommy Steel (Boston Wonder Workers), Findlay Kerr (Fall River Marksmen); Fullbacks: Cy Davis (Philadelphia), Dave Ferguson (Bethlehem Steel), David Robertson (Brooklyn Wanderers), Billy Wilson (New Bedford Whalers), Jock Marshall (Newark Skeeters); Halfbacks: Tommy Stark, Henry Meyerdirks, George Moorhouse (New York Giants), James Kelly (Newark Skeeters), Bill Carnihan (Bethlehem Steel), Bill Herd, Billy Morris (Brooklyn Wanderers), Tommy McFarlane (Saylesville R.I.); Forwards: David Brown (New York Giants), Barney Battles (Boston Wonder Workers), Archie Stark, Edmund Smith, Malcolm Goldie (Bethlehem Steel), Bob Millar (Indiana Flooring), Thomas Florie, Andy Auld (Providence Clamdiggers), Johnny McGuire, Gordon Burness (Brooklyn Wanderers).

Some of the players who played for Canada in these games also played for clubs in the ASL, then, or later. They were John Foy and Jimmy Galloway (Boston Wonder Workers), Ed McLaine and Joe Kennaway (Providence Clamdiggers), George Graham and Jimmy Kelly (Fall River Marksmen). In addition, Gordon Burness, who played for the United States in 1926, played for Canada in 1925.

EASTERN SOCCER LEAGUE - 1928-29

The Eastern Soccer League was formed on October 8,1928, at the Cornish Arms Hotel in New York City, as a result of the dispute between the United States Football Association and the American Soccer League. The officials of the new league were as follows: President, Captain E.W. Whitwell, New York; First Vice President, Levi P. Wilcox, Philadelphia; Second Vice President, Joseph J. Barriskill, New York; Secretary, James Armstrong, New York; Treasurer, Allan Cahill, New York.

An announcement was made by Thomas Cahill, Secretary of the USFA, that the action of USFA President Armstrong Patterson of Detroit in suspending the ASL had been formally ratified by the National Commission and that notices to that effect had been sent to the various state associations in this country and to the International Federation, FIFA.

The league was made up of the three clubs suspended by the ASL, Bethlehem Steel, Newark Skeeters, and New York Giants, plus a number of teams from the Southern New York State Soccer Association.

A new team, formed by the former members of Vienna Hakoah who had moved to the United States, was named New York Hakoah and took its place in the new league. The teams from the SNYSSA were New York Hungaria, New York Hispano, New York Celtics, Philadelphia Centennials, and I.R.T. Rangers, the team of the New York Rapid Transit System. Late in the season these teams were joined briefly by the New Bedford Whalers from the ASL. The championship for the 1928-29 season was won by Bethlehem Steel.

When the league started up again in the fall of 1929 it contained the following teams. Bethlehem Steel, I.R.T. Rangers, Newark Skeeters, Newark Portuguese, New York Giants, New York Hakoah, New York Hispano, and New York Hungaria. The dispute between the USFA and the ASL was settled on October 9,1929, and the ESL schedule was abandoned in late October, the ESL merging with the ASL to form the Atlantic Coast League.

UNITED STATES OPEN CUP - 1914-1939

The United States Open Cup, the national championship, was open to all senior teams in the United States during the years covered here. At first the final only involved eastern teams, but from 1920 on it was organized on an east-west basis with the final played between the winners of each section. This led to some memorable games involving some memorable teams and while the final for the Thomas Dewar Cup attracted great interest, the eastern finals in the 1920s involving teams from the ASL, were also big attractions. The finals are listed here, not only for the period of the first ASL, but for 1914 right through to 1939, the period involving players who played in the ASL.

Early in 1931 the Fall River franchise in the American Soccer League was transfered to New York City and renamed the New York Yankees. However, as the team had entered the Open Cup as Fall River, it was required to continue playing in the Open Cup under that name. Hence the records of the Open Cup show Fall River as the champions in 1931, in spite of the fact that the team played in shirts that clearly indicated that this was a New York team and that the New York papers hailed it as a triumph for the Yankees.

TOURS

During the years in which the original ASL operated, its teams played many games against well-known foreign touring teams. For the most part the touring teams did not confine themselves just to play against the ASL but toured the United States and Canada playing against a wide variety of opposition. However, for the purposes of this work only the games played against ASL teams are recorded here.

Dick, Kerr Ladies - 1922

A team of women soccer players from Preston, England, toured the eastern United States in 1922, an almost unbelievable event, given the time. Dick, Kerr Ladies were quite well-known in England, and when the team came to the United States, they expected to play women's teams. Instead they played only men's teams and among them some of the best in the ASL. Reports of the games seem to indicate that the Ladies played very well but that the men took it easy on them. Since it took place so long ago, we will never know if the reports were accurate or subject to male chauvinism.

Vienna Hakoah - 1926

Champions of Austria in the 1924-25 season, Hakoah came to the United States after finishing in seventh place in the thirteen-team Austrian League in the 1925-26 season. Made up entirely of Jewish players, Hakaoh was a big hit wherever they played. Following the tour many of the players remained in the United States to play for the Brooklyn Wanderers and New York Giants of the ASL, two teams with Jewish owners.

Sparta Prague - 1926

The champions of Czechoslovakia toured the United States in 1926, playing against a number of ASL teams. One of the more remarkable games of the tour took place in Fall River, where the Marksmen played a league game against Springfield in the morning and then took on Sparta in the afternoon. For the second game, some of the Springfield players guested for Fall River.

Uruguay - 1927

The national team of Uruguay toured the United States in 1927. Olympic champions in 1924 in Paris and soon to repeat as gold medal winners in Amsterdam in 1928 and World Cup winners in 1930, the Uruguayans were a formidable team. However, the contests played against the American teams were far from pleasant; the games in Newark and Boston ended in riots. The Newark riot brought out three patrol wagons and enough policemen to clear the field. The fighting started when Uruguayan player Scarone hit Green of Newark on the jaw with his feet. In Boston with ten minutes left to play, Cea of Uruguay hit McIntyre of Boston and the Boston player retaliated. Several Uruguayans then rushed at McIntyre, and when Priestley of Boston went to the aid of his teammate he was knocked cold by a kick in the lower part of the stomach. McMillan of Boston suffered the same fate and both players had to be carried from the field. In the meantime a free-for-all involving players from both teams ensued, ending as the visitors ran for their dressing room when the crowd invaded the field. Naturally the game was called.

Vienna Hakoah

This was the second Hakoah tour, with the team being billed as the champions of Europe, something they were not. The first European championship was not played until 1955. However, in the year Hakoah toured the U.S., the forerunner of the European championship, known as the Mitropa Cup, began involving Central European teams. Rapid Vienna, Austrian champions at that time, represented Austria. Hakoah had finished ninth in the thirteen-team Austrian League in the 1926-27 season. This tour took the Jewish club into Canada, something the first tour did not.

Italians - Palestra Italia - 1928

The Italian representative team that toured the United States in 1928 was made up mostly of players from Brescia. In some instances the team was referred to simply as the Italians, in other cases as Palestra Italia. In addition to the ten players from Brescia players from Pro Vercelli, Bologna, Livorno, Milan, and Ambrosiana-Inter made up the 17-man squad.

Glasgow Rangers - 1930

The Rangers made a second tour to North America in 1930, traveling from coast to coast across Canada but also playing games in the United States at the beginning and end of the tour. A second Scottish club, cup winners Kilmarnock, also made the trip, confining most of its games to eastern Canada but also playing three games in the United States. They were joined for brief trips by Hungaria of Budapest, Marte of Mexico, and Sportivo of Buenos Aires, Argentina.

Glasgow Celtic - 1931

Glasgow Celtic toured the eastern United States in 1931 but also played two games in Canada. In addition the Spanish team, the Racing Club of Madrid, Argentinian club Velez Sarsfield of Buenos Aires, and Bella Vista of Montevideo, Uruguay, also made brief tours. The game between Velez Sarsfield and Fall River was seen as some measure of revenge for Argentina defeating the United States in the World Cup of 1930. However, contrary to claims made at the time, there was not one player in the Velez Sarsfield squad who played for Argentina in 1930.

Overseas Tours

While teams from Europe and South America toured the United States, American teams also went overseas. One of the more notable tours was that of Fall River to Central Europe. Fall River included a number of guest players in its squad that toured Czechoslovakia, Austria, and Hungary. In addition two players, one from Austria and one from Hungary also guested with Fall River. The team was scheduled to play a much longer tour but it was cut short as a result of a dispute over finances.

At the same time as Fall River was in Europe and the United States national team was playing in the World Cup in Uruguay, the Hakoah All Stars were touring Brazil, Uruguay, and Argentina. One year later Hakoah went to Cuba and Costa Rica.

GLOSSARY

In the course of this book a number of terms and acronyms are used that may need some explanation. They are as follows.

Caps—Starting with the first international games played, a cap was awarded to each player who represented his country. Usually the caps were hung on each player's peg in the dressing room so that when he left the field after the game he received his "cap." These caps usually contained wording indicating the country he played for, the country he played against, and the date. Eventually the expression "cap" or "capped" came to stand for the number of times a player played for his country. Thus in this book four caps means a player represented his country in full international competition four times.

English Football Association—The governing body of soccer in England officially known as "The Football Association" formed in 1863 and being the first such body ever formed. The Football Association organizes the competition known as the FA Cup and selects and fields the English national team in competitions such as the World Cup. Currently the Football Association organizes the Premier League featuring the top professional teams in England.

FIFA—Federation of International Football Associations, the United Nations of soccer, governing body of all soccer all over the world to which all of the national governing bodies are affiliated. FIFA was founded on May 21,1904.

Football League—A professional soccer league formed in England in 1888 and for many years considered the top professional league in England. The Football League is affiliated to the Football Association. For many years the Football League representative team played games against the representative teams of the Scottish League, Irish League, and the League of Ireland.

Own Goal (o.g.)—a goal scored by a player against his own team by accident, often by deflecting a shot from an attacking player.

Scottish Football Association—The governing body of soccer in Scotland. Organizers of the Scottish FA Cup, and the organization responsible for selecting and fielding the Scottish national team.

Scottish League—The top professional soccer league in Scotland. Teams representing the Scottish League played against the Football League, the Irish League, Welsh League, and League of Ireland.

USFA—United States Football Association, the governing body of the game in the United States. Formed in 1913, the original name was changed first to the United States Soccer Football Association (USSFA) and then to today's United States Soccer Federation (USSF). Today this organization is sometimes referred to as US Soccer.

W—Won

L—Lost

T—Tied

H—Home game

A—Away game

Particularly in the biographical section, reference is made to the grounds used by various teams in England and Scotland. In reading these biographies you will come across the following names of grounds.

Pittodrie (the home ground of Aberdeen), Shawfield (the home ground of Clyde), Villa Park (Aston Villa), Goodison Park (Everton), Parkhead (Celtic), Deepdale (Preston North End), Home Park (Plymouth Argyle), Feethams Ground (Darlington), White Hart Lane (Tottenham Hotspur), St. James Park (Newcastle United), Ibrox Park (Glasgow Rangers), East End Park (Dunfermline Athletic).

Other terms used are the "Dons," the nickname for Aberdeen, and "Spurs," the nickname for Tottenham Hotspur.

In the years since the ASL was operating, a number of teams referred to in this book, particularly in Scotland, have disappeared from the Scottish League. Among these are Nithsdale Wanderers, which played in the town of Sanquhar near the border of Dumfrieshire and Ayrshire; Arthurlie, a team from Barrhead; Broxburn United; Bathgate; Vale of Leven; Bo'ness; King's Park; Lochgelly United; Dundee Hibernian (now Dundee United); Armadale; and Third Lanark. Some of the other teams named are Scottish junior teams that often produced many professional players.

Also it should be noted that you will not find some of the names of today's Scottish teams on a map. St. Mirren, for example, is the team from Paisley, south of Glasgow; Albion Rovers from Coatbridge; East Fife from Methil; Heart of Midlothian (Hearts) and Hibernian from Edinburgh; Queen of the South from Dumfries; Raith Rovers from Kirkaldy; St. Johnstone from Perth; and Rangers, Celtic, Partick Thistle, and Queens Park from Glasgow.

Many of the players and administrators mentioned in this book are members of the National Soccer Hall of Fame in Oneonta, New York. Oneonta is located on Interstate 88 in New York State, between Binghamton and Albany and close to the National Baseball Hall of Fame in Cooperstown.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Colin Jose is a soccer historian and journalist who has been writing about the sport in the United States and Canada for over thirty years. This is his fourth book, the others being The Story of Soccer in Canada (with Bill Rannie), NASL—A Complete Record of the North American Soccer League, and The United States and World Cup Soccer Competition (Scarecrow Press, 1994). He has also written numerous other publications, including Olympic Football (Part 1 and 2), a statistical record of the Olympic soccer tournament, and Canada 1885-1995, a statistical record of Canada's national soccer teams. In addition he has been a regular contributor to the British magazine World Soccer for many years and to a variety of Canadian and American soccer magazines and papers. Currently he is a member of the Executive Committee of the International Federation of Football History and Statistics (Wiesbaden, Germany), a director of the Society for American Soccer History (Oneonta, New York), and a member of the Heritage Committee of the Ontario Soccer Association. Born in Falmouth, England, Jose has lived in Canada for close to forty years and makes his home in Hamilton, Ontario, with his wife, Karen, his daughter, Carla, and son Christopher.
